Serra statue to grace Carmel Mission Basilica

EVEN THOUGH it is still unclear exactly where the bronze statue of Father Junipero Serra, which was donated to the Carmel by Mara Domecq last month, will stand at the Carmel Mission Basilica, it is almost assured it will be in place by the time Pope John Paul II arrives Sept. 17. The 5.8-foot tall statue was sculpted by Juan De Avalos, who has been receiving worldwide recognition for his work for more than half a century. Domecq says she came up with the idea for the gift while on a six-month pilgrimage of California missions commemorating the 200th anniversary of the death of Father Serra. Spencers gets an OK for use of second story

By NANCY HILLS

SPENCERS STATIONERY won two battles at the Carmel City Council meeting Tuesday, one of which could affect other local businesses considered residentially-oriented.

The council unanimously approved an ordinance Aug. 4 which allows any business that meets the ordinance-mandated criteria for a residentially-oriented business to locate anywhere in the commercial district.

The ordinance also contains provisions that permit the suspension of certain zoning and parking requirements when appropriate.

One of those requirements it can suspend is the ban on retail use on the second story.

Additionally, in a 3-2 vote, the council overturned a planning commission denial of Spencers' owner Jim Dougherty's application to use a second story for retail in a building he plans to purchase.

Spencers Stationery will be the first application for the special "overlay district," as it is referred to in the staff report.

"I think it's long past time for the city to bite the bullet and do something if it is to retain any significant portion of its residentially-oriented commercial neighborhood," Councilman Bob Fischer said after the ordinance was introduced by staff.

Dougherty had submitted a petition with about 500 names requesting the council approve the law.

"I'd like to thank people for the local support I received and everyone who was involved in the process," Dougherty said in a later interview with The Carmel Pine Cone.

He said that he would take about four months to remodel the building and probably will move the store in January.

Though Spencers was originally a part of the ordinance — therefore automatically receiving its benefits — the council removed any specific reference to the store on the advice of City Atty. Don Freeman.

Dougherty will now have to apply for a use permit and go through the process outlined in the new law.

The council approved his appeal to "encourage" him, as stated by Councilman Bob Evans.

According to the ordinance, to qualify for its provisions — the criteria the business must be meet — as judged by the city council and planning commission, are:

Paradise and the devil

Dear Editor:

For money you can see the devil dance. That I must say when I pass one of the windows of the Paradise shops display on Dolores Street and Ocean Avenue. It is not only an insult to Mayor Clint Eastwood, but the people of Carmel to use his name in the most degrading way. Whether we have voted for the man or not, as long as he represents the town respectfully, this kind of advertising should not be accepted (I refer specifically to the bikinis).

If the owner, Mr. (Paul) Laub, thinks this is a way to make money, I must say this money stinks and does not bring good luck.

Paradise and the devil do not go well together.

Good Samaritan

Dear Editor:

I had a better than expected visit to Carmel and a shopkeeper I told why suggested that I let everyone know how thoughtful someone in your town is.

My husband and I were on vacation and decided to visit Carmel for the day. Apparently when I got something out of the trunk of my car, my watch fell off.

Later in the day, while my husband and I were shopping, I realized that it was missing. I was very disappointed, not only because I liked the watch, but because it was a special anniversary present from my husband Mac.

When we got back to the car and were leaving, we saw a note on the windshield. Frank at Football USA in Carmel Plaza had found it and left a note for us to retrieve the watch. It was a nice feeling knowning that someone went out of their way to help. It made my day.

Thanks again Frank, and thank you Carmel for having such nice people working in your town.

Political persecution

Dear Editor:

As much as I regret, as did Secretary of State George Schultz, "hanging out our laundry" before the world, the American people have fully understood two important things hearing and watching the Iran-Contra hearings on TV.

One: That there has been and always will be differences of opinion about control of our foreign policy. Clearly it is the job of the executive branch, headed by our president. Certainly 535 members of Congress cannot micro-manage this nation's foreign policy. A disaster to try, is the opinion of a Tower Commission member. Almost impossible to get a consensus from Congress. They have an operator to push the buttons on the Congressional elevators. Sen. Henry Hyde (a hero in my book), pointed out a number of our presidents have made important decisions affecting our nation with no prior consultation with Congress, e.g.: making war on the Barbary Coast pirates, securing Florida territory, thus adding several states, and buying Alaska from Russia.

Secondly: We learn from Secretary Shultz's words there is, and no doubt always will be, grave differences of opinion in the advice given the president by his high level appointees, experts in their fields. They advise according to their best information, information often difficult to obtain. They, as do we, devoutly wish to preserve and advance the best interests of the USA.

Well, then, the members making up these large probing committees should stop this circus at once, quit strutting and fretting. They have had their hour on the stage. We agree with Dr. Zbigniew Brzezinski that if the president's men are tried it will be political persecution, repeat, political persecution, not criminal prosecution.

A rewarding experience

Dear Editor:

Recently, 1,447 Northern California high school students visited Washington, D.C. to participate in the week-long government studies program conducted by the Close Up Foundation.

Students and their teachers followed a fast-paced schedule as they discussed current issues with members of their Congressinoal delegation, questioned Washington experts on domestic and foreign policy, and experienced the pulse of the nation's capital.

The students had an opportunity to learn more about our democratic system of government and about themselves as they worked alongside their peers from around the country. Participation was open to any student regardless of grade point average, extracurricular activities, or physical handicap. As the Close Up Foundation's coordinator for Northern California schools, I was impressed with the energy, enthusiasm and curiosity demonstrated by each of the participants.

To assure a mix of students from all income levels, fellowships for local schools were made possible through a grant from The Dunspaugh-Dalton Foundation, Inc., The Herbst Foundation, Inc., McKesson Foundation, Inc., and Nabisco Brands, Inc.

On behalf of the Close Up Foundation, I want to congratulate all of the Northern California participants, schools, and sponsors who helped make the week a rewarding and enriching experience.

PAUL AMATO of Carmel was a prize winner with this shot, which will be featured in a display of the 1987 Scholastic/Kodak Photography Awards winners at the Columbia School of Visual Arts in Ohio Spet. 20-Oct. 31. The display includes more than 350 black and white and color photographs from across the country. Amato earned his place in the annual presentation by winning a nationwide competition, which is celebrating its 25th year. Amato also won a $35 Honor Award.

YMCA swimming now offered at CV youth center

YMCA swimming programs — both recreational and lap swimming — are now offered at Carmel Valley Community Youth Center pool.

The programs are offered by the YMCA and the community center. Lifeguards will be on duty. Cost is $1.50 per day, payable at the pool.

The center is located at 25 Ford Road. For more information call Scott Graham at 373-4167.

Blood pressure should be lowered

High blood pressure adds to the work-load of the heart and arteries, which may contribute to stroke, heart attack, kidney failure, and congestive heart failure. There is accumulating evidence that lowering blood pressure reduces the risk of stroke and coronary heart disease, according to the American Heart Association.

CSAA suggestions for vacationers

THE CALIFORNIA State Automobile Association suggests that motorists check their cars before leaving for the holiday weekend:

- If your car needs a tune-up, do it before you travel.
- Remember to check all fluid levels (radiator, transmission and engine oil).
- Make sure that brakes, steering mechanisms and alignment are checked.
- Tires need to be in good condition, in balance and properly inflated.
- Be sure to inspect your spare tire, too.
- Check the battery and cables.

Birth mothers group meets every month

A BIRTH mothers support group meets once a month at the Childrens Services Center in Monterey.

Birth mothers are women who have given their children up for adoption; the group allows these women to share their feelings with others, according to Terri Livingston, who has been a member of the year-old group.

"There are a lot of women out there...and there's a lot of pain involved," she said. "This gives them a chance to talk about it. We're not a search group, but we have information on it."

The support group meets at 7 p.m. on the last Wednesday of each month at the center at 484 Lighthouse in New Monterey. More information can be obtained by calling either Carol Bishop or Gayle Ward at Childrens Services Center of Monterey County, 649-3033.

Candidates emerging for water board election

By NANCY HILLS

CANDIDATES ARE beginning to line up for three seats on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's seven-member board of directors for the Nov. 3 election. The lineup will be minus one veteran incumbent of the district board.

John Williams, a vocal critic of the proposed dam and the growth he believes it will engender, will not be seeking re-election. Williams said a change in his work schedule leaves him with inadequate time to devote to the board and he is tired of "saying the same thing over and over."

His decision leaves at least one seat wide open on Nov. 3.

Two other incumbents, present board chairman Dick Heuer and director Pat Bernardi, are giving the four-year terms another try and will seek re-election.

New hopefuls in the race so far are Monterey architect Paul Davis, Pacific Grove dentist and former city councilman Jim Hughes, environmentalist Michael Bogatirev and Steve Grabinski.

At The Carmel Pine Cone press time only Michael Bogatirev and Steve Grabinski had filed their papers with the county board of elections.

However, Heuer, Bernardi, Davis and Hughes have all declared their intentions to file before the deadline. Deadline for incumbents is Aug. 7, but for non-incumbents it is extended to Aug. 12. The filing date is extended a week when an incumbent decides not to file.

Williams, a hydrologist and probably the most pro-environment board member, was one of the first water district directors, elected when the district board was formed in November 1978. He took two years off in the early 1980s to work as a district staff member. After his two years as staff, he ran again for the board and has been a director ever since.

Williams explained he decided against running because he is now working in San Francisco for a hydrology consulting firm and will not be able to devote the time required of district board members.

Also, he said, "quite frankly, I'm tired of seeing and saying the same thing over and over again. And tired of listening to the same thing over and over again."

As the only director who has taken a stance against the dam, Williams was often a lone voice criticizing the project.

"The basic reason I'm against the dam," Williams explained, "hasn't to do so much with the Carmel River environment itself but the growth on the peninsula."

The "consequences" of that growth is not only in the physical environment, Williams said, but the political environment "as this area becomes increasingly dominated by the hospitality industry."

Williams feels that smaller dams have been discarded too quickly and, in particular, an off-Carmel River reservoir on San Clemente Creek should have been pursued in much more depth.

Recent criticism against the district and board members "are by and large unjustified. Generally, the staff works gruesomely hard. I was there Monday morning and they had all been there all night Sunday working," Williams said.

But, he countered, he believes "it's true that the board's decisions revolve too much around what's good or bad for the (proposed) San Clemente Dam."

The environmental impact report, he said, is "too narrowly focused" on a larger dam on the Carmel River.

WITH WILLIAMS out of the race, challengers will be competing for one open seat and the seats now occupied by Heuer and Bernardi.

Heuer, elected in November 1983, has been the district board chairman for the past year and during his term, a strong proponent for the proposed New San Clemente Dam on the Carmel River.

Patricia Bernardi, also elected November 1983, has also been in favor of the project and has also been active in developing water reclamation projects.

Bernardi was also out of town and unavailable for comment.

Monterey architect Davis explained he was interested in the water board because "there will be important decisions to be made on the dam in the next fours years."

The annual water allocation to the district's communities, how the water is released from the dam to the cities and counties, and negotiations with California Department of Fish and Game over water for the environment were some of the decisions Davis said he believes are important for the future of the peninsula.

"There must be a balance between the water supply, environment of the river, Fish and Game and all those factors," he said.

Davis was an unsuccessful candidate in last year's Monterey City Council election, losing by about 200 votes, he said.

A founding member of the 18-year-old architectural firm Davis, Jacobowski, Hawkins and Walls, Davis said he has now set up his own office with his son.

While at the larger firm, Davis was the lead architect for Hotel Pacifica, Hyatt Regency Conference Center and Spindrift Hotel, all in Monterey; Seaside's community facility; and Cypress Community Church in Corral de Tierra.

Davis said he was also involved with the conceptual planning and approval process of the Monterey Plaza Hotel, though he was not a part of the final design.

He has been active and interested in community affairs for a long time, he said, and has served as the Monterey Peninsula chairman of the United Way and Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

To make any statement on the issues, Davis said, would be "premature" as he would like to see the draft EIR on the proposed project first.

"As an architect, I've worked with EIRs and understand that process," Davis said. "Right now it's more of a question on how much to give to Fish and Game. I'm definitely for preserving the environment and working with Fish and Game. I'm not against that at all, I'm just concerned that there is a balanced approach."

The process can be slow he said, but it can develop a better project.

Davis added he is also "for water reclamation" and the present proposal the district is working on with the Pebble Beach Co., local sanitary districts and jurisdictions within the district.

Pebble Beach Co. and the district are currently working on a project where the company would guarantee payment of a bond for a proposed $15 million project at Carmel Sanitary District.

"I still don't think that that should slow down the moving forward on the dam," Davis added.

HUGHES, A a Pacific Grove councilman for 20 years, stated he believes "that water is probably one of the biggest concerns we're going to have on the peninsula for the next few years."

His candidacy is a result of his feeling "we need a little more balance on the board. Carmel Valley is primarily represented right now (five of the seven-member board live in Carmel Valley,)" Hughes said.

The dam and how to divide its resources is another primary concern of Hughes.

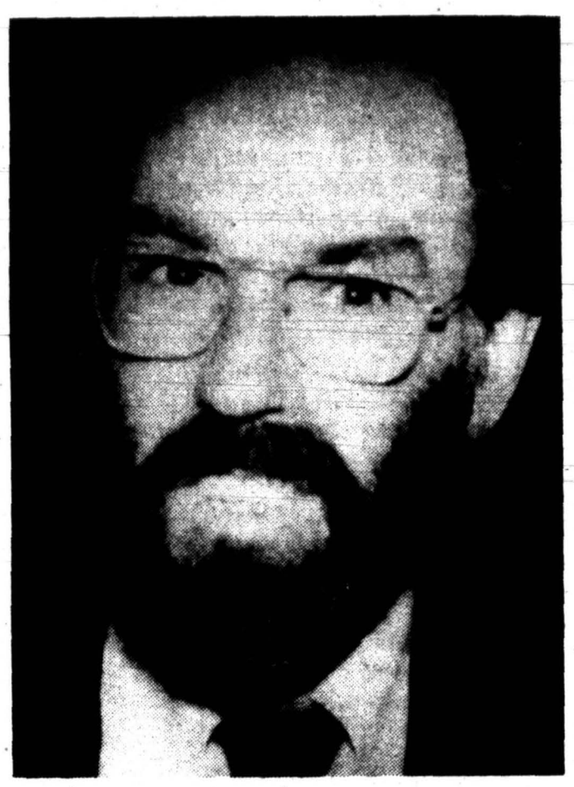
"I'm for the dam, no question about that. I have been since the inception of the district. If people decide they don't want the dam, everything will come to a roaring halt. I'm open-minded about it and will listen to alternatives but there is no question in my mind there should be a project," Hughes said.

Some of the past directors opposed the dam, which slowed its development, Hughes claimed.

"I'm not saying the present incumbents have wanted to delay it," Hughes added.

"The dam will provide water for the future and drought protection. We're lucky the last time we had a drought it lasted only two years," he said.

"The trouble with Fish and Game is that sometimes they go overboard and ask for the moon," Hughes said, commenting on the state agency's negotiations for releases into the Carmel River and ways to preserve the steelhead fish population.



VETERAN WATER board member John Williams, a vocal critic of a new dam on the Carmel River, has decided not to seek another term on the water management district board because of his business commitments.

He believes that the proposed amount of water that will be taken directly from the dam for human consumption may be too small.

Hughes, who was defeated in last year's PG city council election, said that along with his 20 consecutive years on the PG City Council, he has served as a director on the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency up until last year; a commissioner on the Californian Coastal Commission; and was one of the founders of the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG). He feels his participation in those agencies has given him the experience needed for the water management board.

Candidates Michael Bogatirev and Steven Grabinski listed no telephone number on their applications, therefore could not be located by The Carmel Pine Cone.

County in for long ride in revamping planning process

By DAVID LELAND

EVEN BEFORE the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Tuesday unanimously accepted a long-awaited report on county land use and planning procedures, its authors were placed on the hotseat by supervisors.

And as Tom Kenan, co-author of the 225-page report commissioned by the board in January, listened politely to both criticism and praise by the board it was apparent that the county could be in for a long ride trying to carry out the 136 recommendations listed in the document.

"The report is specific enough to allow us to take action," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who initiated the study. "That's what we're here for, not lip service."

The next step in county process will be to distribute the remaining 145 copies of the document to various organizatons whose members are concerned with the county's permit process. These include real estate boards, architects, homeowners associations and the Sierra Club.

The report will also be available in various branches of the county library.

Those wishing to read and comment on the report must have letters into the county administrator's office in Salinas by Sept. 4.

The matter will come before the board to begin its input on Sept. 29, with supervisors vowing to carry out the simplest recommendations first and then dig into the more complicated, difficult matters.

If all of the team's recommendations are approved, it will cost the county about $195,000 the first year and about $105,000 each year after.

Also contributing to the "Kenan Report" were county principal analyst Lee Williams and senior administrative analyst Jim Cook.

Initially, the report was commissioned to "streamline" the county's planning process, which had applicants up in arms coping with delays, logistical problems and misunderstandings.

In preparing the report, Kenan said one of the problems he had run into was that the planning process is filled with safety measures to keep it slow so no mistakes are made — those mechanisms remain intact.

"The laws are still there," he said. "There is a limit to the extent you can make any sweeping changes that could fast-track the process."

Nevertheless, in order to get an accurate picture and make what changes they could, Kenan and his team interviewed 96 people, including members of the county staff as well as those who had attempted to apply for building permits — those included contractors and private individuals.

WHILE KENAN and his co-workers received accolades from all of the supervisors, there was also a downside to the input.

According to 1st Distirct Supervisor Marc Del Piero, one recommendation calling for a building applicant to draft his own environmental impact report on a project has already been tried by the county.

It failed miserably and was changed in 1979 to the current system of the county planning department being in charge of selecting the consultant to perform the work.

"We've had bad projects approved by bogus deals being cut," said Del Piero, referring to some applicants cutting sweetheart deals in order to bypass potential environmental problems. "The express reason the county changed is because of that problem."

He cited as an example the approval of Laguna Seca, which received a building permit but had sewage problems for 20 years.

But Kenan was not convinced that there could not be a happy medium between the past and current procedures.

"The way we do business now appears to us to be more appearance than substance," he said.

Del Piero, however, was adamant regarding this particular recomendation.

"I worked under this system (as a Monterey County Planning Commissioner)," he said. "There was so much collusion that we had a large amount of bad planning approved."

The majority of the report took aim at the county planning department, which is still reeling from last month's Grand Jury report.

And, like the Grand Jury report, Kenan's team recommends that the county's planning and building departments be consolidated under one department.

The report even goes as far as to recommend that by June 30, 1988, the county Social Services Department be relocated and the planning and bulding inspection department be moved to that building on Natividad Road from its current location at the county courthouse.

But Bob Slimmon, county planning director, said he was not at all offended by the recent notoriety his department has received.

"I don't see the Kenan Report or the Grand Jury Report as picking on us," he said. "They merely point out problems in the planning process."

Slimmon added that the planning department is also more visible than other county divisions.

"I view the Kenan Report as a positive rather than a negative report," he said.

Council OKs Spencers use of second story

• It is undersupplied in town in comparison to other typical cities.

• The use must provide a service or products that are considered "reasonably or normally essential for the conduct of the typical day-to-day living activities of local residents."

• The type of business or use must be threatened with extinction, hindered or restrained by one or more of the city codes.

• Locating the business or use in the zone must not have an adverse impact on surrounding properties.

• Application of the ordinance for a business must be found to "enhance the welfare of the city" and carry out provisions in the general plan.

• It cannot increase pedestrian traffic that would affect surrounding residences.

THE POSSIBLE closing of Spencers Stationery, one of Carmel's oldest businesses, triggered the development of the ordinance.

Located on Ocean Avenue for 50 years, Spencers Stationery space recently received a threefold rent increase, which prompted Dougherty to look for another location.

To overcome rent increase problems, Dougherty decided to purchase a building in the rear of the Court of the Golden Bough on the south side of Ocean Avenue between Lincoln and Monte Verde streets.

The building is located in the residential-commercial zone, which did not permit stationery stores. The planning commission recommended and the council approved adding stationery to the list of permitted businesses in the RC district.

However, the first floor of the building was too small for Spencers needs, so Dougherty applied to also use the second floor for retail display. Second floor use for retail is now prohibited by code.

When Dougherty applied, there were no exceptions to the code, so the commission had to vote against the application for second-floor use, but granted him permission to use the former apartment for storage. It was that decision Dougherty appealed.

In the meantime, the commission began working on an ordinance or some other means to allow local, residentially-oriented businesses more choices on where to locate and relieve them of certain code restrictions that might raise their operating costs.

In a series of meetings, the last a special meeting called on the Friday before the council meeting, the commission worked to develop the ordinance.

The final product, presented at the council meeting, was approved in a 3-2 commission vote (two commissioners, Ken White and Olof Dahlstrand are on vacation).

Commissioners Howard Nieman and Carla Ramsey voted against the ordinance after a volatile debate with the other commissioners and staff about some of the legalities of the ordinance, the number of floors in the building and when the apartment was last used.

Ramsey conditioned her "no" vote by stating she was voting against the ordinance because it could not be proven when the apartment was last used as a residence. She had received recent information that the apartment was recently used as a residence, contrary to a letter submitted to the planning department stating it had not been used for that purpose for some time.

Ramsey was concerned that by allowing Spencers to usurp an apartment in recent use as a residence, would allow other businesses utilizing the ordinance to do the same.

That could affect the housing supply in the commercial district. When White could not find the letter during the meeting attesting to the apartment's abandonment, she voted against approving the ordinance.

Nieman's main objection centered around the fact that there is a third floor in the building which was not identified to the commissioners and the inclusion of Spencers in the ordinance.

At the city council meeting, Wright expressed many of the same concerns, but voted for the ordinance when the reference to Spencers was removed. Wright said he would rather see the ordinance postponed to give them more time to work on some of the conditions.

In other business, the council:

• Approved an ordinance change that allows non-conforming residences if destroyed by fire, to be reconstructed the same as the original structure and not have to meet current zoning regulations.

• Watched a slide show presentation by retired Col. David McNerney about the upcoming papal visit to the Monterey Peninsula. McNerney is the director of Pope John Paul II's visit to the United States.

• Denied an appeal by a Vietnam veterans group to use the Sunset Center parking lot for a fund-raising art show. The council, with Mayor Clint Eastwood and Fishcer casting dissenting votes, felt it would set a precedent for other organizations to do the same.

• Disbanded and commended for their hard work the General Plan Review Committee at the request of Councilman Bob Evans, chairman of the committee.

SPENCERS STATIONERY will be moving from its longtime Ocean Avenue location early next year. The city council approved an ordinance that will permit it, if the store meets the criteria, to use a second floor for retail display in its new location. The ordinance was triggered by Spencers possible move out of Carmel if it could not relocate in the city. (Holly McFarland photo.)

It was close, but papal Mass EIR gets an OK

By DAVID LELAND

THE MONTEREY County Planning Commission stunned both diosese officals and spectators last week as it narrowly approved a special use permit for Pope John Paul II's Laguna Seca Mass.

The commission, meeting in a special session, voted 5-4 to issue the permit after certifying an environmental impact report and hearing public testimony. It was not expected that there would be as much opposition to the approval.

About 100,000 people are expected to gather at the county-owned park Sept. 17 for the papal Mass.

And while it was all optimism sprouting from retired Col. David McNerney, coordinator of the papal visit, there were some sharp comments coming from several commissioners.

Commissioner Jo Stallard said she believed there were just too many things that could go wrong that day to merit approval of the permit, even though McNerney said his task force had run through any number of "worst-case scenarios."

"You have to realize that Murphy's Law will be in full effect that day," she said. "I wish you good luck."

Voting against approval of the permit were Stallard and commissioners Calvin Reaves, Gloria Moore and Marit Evans.

Voting for the use permit were commissioners Louis Calcagno, Tom Glau, David Hendrick, Manuel Jimenez and Lynn Riddle.

Even though several commissioners attempted to break through McNerney's calm facade with technical questions, such as how many minutes it would take to unload buses (20 minutes to unload and 30 minutes to load), he never wavered.

"We have not found any problems we could not handle," said McNerney, whose task force began work on logistics one year ago.

One of the chief concerns expressed by commissioners involved traffic and how it will be rerouted.

According to the EIR, which was prepared by Richmond-based LSA Associates, Inc. for $16,500, Highway 68 — the main thoroughfare between Salinas and Monterey — will be closed from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m.

A traffic count in the EIR showed that when cars travelling both directions are combined, almost 1,500 use the road at 7 a.m.

Those cars will be rerouted to Route 1, Reservation Road and Blanco Road.

"I just see an impossible situation as far as traffic," Reeves said. "I hope I'm wrong."

THE POPE will arrive at 9:30 a.m. at Monterey Airport and will say Mass at Laguna Seca at 9:50.

That time frame will require quite a wait for some of the spectators, who will begin to be bused in at 3 a.m.

During their wait, they will be shown video presentations on a 35-by-40-foot television screen as well as listening to music.

When the pope arrives at the airport there will be a live "feed" from there to Laguna Seca. John Paul's visit to the Carmel Mission Basilica will also be televised at the raceway.

All seating — with the exception of limited seats for the handicapped — will be on the hillside above the pond in the middle of the raceway.

"We can put 100,000 people in there very confidently," McNerney said. "Frankly, there's not a bad seat in the house."

When a person needs to use one of the 796 portable restrooms at the park, he will be able to find his way back to his seat by the way the sections will be divided, McNerney said.

White vegetable dye will separate the different sections along with a series of fencing.

During the saying of Mass, the pope will give communion to 100 people, he will be assisted by 500 priests in giving communion to those desiring the rites. The entire communion part of the ceremony will take about 13 minutes.

When one commissioner questoned whether that would be somewhat impossible, McNerney said in San Antonio and Miami, the pope will give communion to 500,000 people.

Each person entering the raceway and the mission in Carmel will have to pass through a metal detector, McNerney added.

County fire chiefs consolidate recommendations

By DAVID LELAND

AFTER A volatile beginning, local agencies are falling into accord with similar recommendations for preventing another fire such as the recent tragedy in Pebble Beach.

This week the Monterey County Board of Supervisors heard a brief report by Monterey County fire chiefs, which outlined as major problems the lack of a central command post and poor radio communications.

No action was required on the report by the supervisors.

The principal recommendations pointed out in the fire chiefs' report coincide with earlier reports made to the board and also parallels the board's advice to the county.

Since the May 31 Morse Fire, which destroyed 31 homes and caused $18 million in damage, there has been some finger pointing between the county communications department, Califoria Department of Forestry and county fire chiefs.

But all that seems to have fallen by the wayside, with agencies coming up with many of the same ideas for preventing another catastrophe.

"This has been a harmonious endeavor in retrospect," said 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman. "We've made tremendous progress within the last month."

The main problem during the fire, according to Tony Fink, president of the Monterey County Fire Chiefs Association, was that each agency thought it was in charge.

"On a countywide basis, there was very little understanding of the command situation and how players need to interact," Fink said.

Fink said a command post should have been established by CDF, which would have regulated all of the responding agencies.

"All government agencies involved in the emergency management should have a sufficient number of key personnel trained in the Incident Command System," the report states. "This training should be conducted twice annually under the direction of the County Fire Warden.

"The Board of Supervisors should (also) take an active role by mandating this training for affected county agencies and assume an appropriate share of the cost."

The very nature of the county's makeup makes this type of coordination difficult, he said.

"If you divide the topography, economy, dispatch units, independent command systems and rules and regulations," he said, "things are bound to go wrong."

He also pointed out that firefighters did well to lose only 31 homes during the blaze.

"At the height of the fire, we had 300 homes (to protect) and only 19 engines," he said.

Fink also recommended that the radio communication system between emergency agencies be linked into the same frequency.

That has already been initiated by the county communications department and has been budgeted for the sheriff's department for the coming year, Strasser Kauffman said.

OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS pointed out by the fire chiefs included:

• The fire chiefs conducting a detailed review of the current mutual aid program to battle both structural and wildland fires.

All sides agree that the most difficult part of fighting the Morse Fire was that it combined a wildland blaze with a structural fire. There are two different methodologies used to fight the fires.

• The Monterey County Department of Communications, in conjunction with the fire chiefs' association, develop a comprehensive dispatcher training course dealing with operational and support requirements of the county fire services.

• Major wildland/urban areas should be identified. Emergency evacuation plans for these areas should be developed through the community planning process.

The fire chiefs' report also recommends that pre-planned exercises be developed in those areas and joint training be conducted simulating emergency evacuation and rescue.

During the Morse Fire, evacuations were performed by firefighters and several off-duty policemen, as the fire tore through the Huckleberry Hill section of Pebble Beach.

• A public education program should be developed for each of the areas identified as "high risk" and presented annually to the affected residents.

Reception points should be identified for each area and the residents should be informed of those during each presentation.

• A countywide media hotline should be established.

During the Morse Fire, the press was receiving different information from each command center it called. This provided for a discrepancy on how many homes had been lost and the progress of the firefighting effort.

Fink would not commit himself or his organization on how long it would take to carry out the recommendations.

"Some may be very quick, some may be years in the making and some may never happen," he said.

New magazine will focus on city's unique qualities

By DAVID LELAND

BOTH RESIDENTS and visitors will reap benefits from Carmel's newest publication, Buying The Best, a shopping, souvenir and buying guide, due to hit the streets late this fall.

Combining the efforts of Bill Brown, publisher of The Pine Cone and freelance writer/publisher Marie Wilson, Buying The Best will offer a multi-color annual magazine focusing on the people and products that make Carmel unique.

"A quality product is needed here to highlight the area," says Brown, who purchased The Pine Cone in 1982. "It's one of the most beautiful places in the world and it needs to have a magazine to reflect that."

Being used as a prototype for Carmel's Buying The Best, is an identical journal published last year in Perth, Australia by Wilson and her partner, Judi Moylan.

That glossy, 60-page publication, which will soon be available in the United States, targets quality items to profile — diamonds, pearls, real estate and colorful personalities are some of the soon-to-be featured stories.

Special sections will include location maps, a comprehensive shopping guide which lists stores and boutiques, plus an annual calendar of events.

The publication also will offer mail order information and a Buying The Best shopping card offering reader discounts.

Wilson says she picked Carmel to start her newest Buying The Best because it has the ideal ingredients for the high-class magazine — quaint shops, interesting people and a unique atmosphere.

She says she chose the village over other possible cities that could have supported such a project, with Sausalito, San Francisco, Santa Cruz and Capitola being considered as likely candidates.

Wilson has also become a Carmel resident for the same reasons she decided to publish here.

"I'm very careful where I live," says Wilson, who has lived in four countries worldwide. "I like to choose my environment."

She says she approached Brown and The Pine Cone because he was tied into the community's needs.

Brown, who also serves on the Carmel Planning Commission, says he thinks his latest effort may be just what the doctor ordered.

"We just wanted to associate with a quality publication," says Brown. "With Marie's experience and ability we can produce what the community needs."

WILSON COMES to Carmel via Australia, Fiji, Norway and Japan. She says she initially came up with the idea for a quality shopper's guide while living in Perth during the America's Cup yacht races.

Actually, she was approached by Moylan, an Australian real estate law teacher, who suggested the duo combine an effort featuring real estate.

Wilson wanted to do a magazine featuring America's Cup — they compromised on Buying The Best, which was an immediate success Down Under.

The first printing of Carmel's Buying The Best is due Dec. 5, when about 20,000 copies will be delivered to the area.

They will be available through both the advertisers and also will be sold locally.

"It illustrates the large number of opportunities we have here for shopping," says Brown. "It's good for visitors as well as residents."

The magazine will also be distributed nationwide by nationally-known agents Tom and Marilyn Ross, who will also assist in media coverage.

Serra has special meaning for Spanish woman

By DAVID LELAND

MARA DOMECQ is happy. And when she's happy, the sun shines on Carmel.

Take, for example, Domecq's donation of an almost 6-foot tall statue of Father Junipero Serra, which will stand at the Carmel Mission Basilica.

"I wanted to do something unique; I wanted to give something special," says Domecq, who hails from San Roque in the southern portion of Spain.

"Unique" is putting it mildly.

The bronze statue Domecq had commissioned was sculpted by Juan De Avalos, who has been receiving honors for his work worldwide since the 1930s.

But even with De Avalos' half century of working with bronze, he was somewhat taken aback by Domecq's request for eyes made of agate.

"He said, 'Why don't you put in plastic eyes?' " says Domecq, with a tone of exasperation. "I said, 'What are you doing?' "

Just to make sure the statue was going as planned, Domecq made monthly trecks to De Avalos' studio — about 500 miles from her home.

"The eyes were very complicated," explains Domecq. "It's like a piece jewelry to get the expression."

But this month, after a year in the making and spending more than $50,000 of her own money on artist fees and transportation, Domecq delivered the statue to the city.

Currently the piece is resting at the Carmel Public Works Department, waiting for a home.

Actually, the work is destined for the Carmel Mission, but it is unclear exactly where it will stand.

"They're trying to establish what place is best for all reasons," says Bruna Odello, who has worked closely with the mission for 40 years.

Odello says she was more than a little bit moved by Domecq's altruism.

"I'm impressed; I'm blown away, if you will," says a breathless Odello. "It's a magnificant piece of work."

THE IDEA for the statue appeared while Domecq was making a pilgrimage of California missions to commemorate the death of Father Serra 200 years ago.

So, on Nov. 11, 1984, Domecq saddled up Blue, her white Arabian gelding, and left Sonoma to visit all of the state's 21 missions.

Domecq says she has been riding since she was a small girl, with her family raising horses.

Domecq's family also has been making fine brandy and wine in Spain since 1730.

Also travelling with Domecq and riding in a specially-made saddle from Germany on Blue's rump was Jalima, Domecq's perfectly-manicured white French poodle.

Jalima and Domecq are inseparable, the dog waits obediently at her feet during interviews and even goes out to dinner with her on special occasions.

As Domecq wandered down the state, she tried to relive the days when missions were first being erected.

"It was very hard," says Domecq, who says she only stayed in a hotel one time during her six-month pilgrimage. "But it was a spritual experience because I prayed so much."

Assisting Domecq was the Heritage Trails Fund, which set up the tour by getting her access permission and maps.

Also during the long days, Domecq kept a diary of her feelings and experiences. The 490-page effort will be available soon as a hardbound book.

But Domecq never waivered from her goal of retracing Serra's footsteps — if he could do it, so could she.

"As a Catholic and also a spiritual person to put his footsteps in California is very brave," she says, with her thick Spanish accent and near-perfect English.

But when Domecq reached Southern California, the concept of a statue for Carmel began to take shape.

"The idea for the statue came when I was in the Mission of San Juan de Capistrano," remembers Domecq. "I was asked to donate something for the new church which was being built."

Chuch officials in San Juan Capistrano sought a wooden statue of Serra, Domecq thought that was nice and complied with their request, but she had something different in mind for Carmel.

"Knowing that he (Serra) is buried in Carmel, I thought there should be a statue in his memory there," she says. "And bronze is forever."

AS A devout Catholic, Domecq thought it proper to communicate with Pope John Paul II after her pilgrimage in praise of Father Serra — so she went to seek an audience with him.

She didn't go alone, mind you, she flew Blue and Jalima with her — Blue now lives in Spain.

But after waiting a month to see the pope at his summer home Castel Gandolfo, she was told she could only have a private audience.

"I tried my best to be on my horse to see

Landell Studios' permit review on planning agenda

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL Planning Commission next week will face a business use permit review, an office expansion into a residence and a determination of whether less is really more.

The commission will meet at 3 p.m., Wednesday, Aug. 12 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

Landell Studios will be the subject of one of the commission's first revocation/or use permit amendment hearings. The commission will determine if the business, issued a miscellaneous home furnishing use permit earlier this year, has violated the conditions of that permit and is, in fact, an art gallery.

The commission will also consider amending the permit to allow the business to carry consignment merchandise.

Landell, located on the westside of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, was granted a permit to do business as a miscellaneous home furnishings shop in a location formerly used for an interior design store. Landell relocated there from its former space in the Del Dono Court on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue.

In its Del Dono Court location, Landell was listed as an art gallery and conducted business primarily as an art gallery.

Owners Ginna Landis and Sue Blondell, both artists who once specialized in mural paintings, said when applying for the permit for their new space, it would be conducted more as their former San Francisco business. That studio, now closed, included interior design consulting, hand-painted lampshades, pillows and murals or screens.

The commissioners granted the permit, but added a condition they not look like a gallery or carry merchandise on consignment.

However, recent ads have advertised gallery showings and visitors to Landell, which has been open about six weeks, say it generally looks more like a gallery than a home furnishings or interior design shop.

Landis and Blondell told The Carmel Pine Cone that the showing for Australian artists was a commitment they made over a year ago and the artists' representatives placed the ads without their knowledge.

"We were contractually locked into this obligation," Landis said.

The two owners added that shipments of furniture they plan to use for display have been delayed.

"We are more art design than interior design," Landis said, adding that they are a resource for interior decorators rather than interior designers themselves.

Landis and Blondell are requesting that the commission change the "no consignment" provision.

"We can't possibly own all our display furniture," Blondell said. "Furniture stores use demos from manufacturers all the time."

The commission can find that the business is not in compliance and revoke their use permit or continue it to give them time to come into compliance, Planning Director Diane White explained. It could also decide that it is in compliance and do nothing, or change the use permit.

In addition to the Landell hearing, the commission will:

• Consider a request by Carmel dentist Bradford Carl to expand his dental office into a residence/office on Mission Street between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

Tom Nash, Carmel attorney, has opposed the application, stating he lives in the home and uses a portion of it for office space for consulting with his Carmel clients. Nash wrote a letter to the commissioners stating the need for preservation of residences in the city.

Carl, who recently purchased the property, said he believed that Nash uses the home primarily as an office and that it does not work well as a residence because of the dental office in the back.

• The commission will again hear an application by Richard Pepe and Martin Hayman to revise their plans to change Wishart's into an ice cream parlor/bakery.

Hayman and Pepe have requested a reduction in the number of seats and rearrangement of counters they were granted when the commission issued a use permit to transform the approximately 30-year-old Ocean Avenue bakery.

The use permit required that in addition to serving frozen dessert, Wishart's be conducted as a full-line bakery.

Hayman, addressing the planning commission in July, told them that Wishart's does not and will not be making bread or large cakes anymore, which most commissioners agreed was a part of a full-line bakery.

Because they are not baking the larger items, commissioners Carla Ramsey and Howard Nieman have questioned whether the bakery is in compliance with either its old use as a full-line bakery or the new permit which also states it must be a full-line bakery.

Ramsey also questioned how long after a use permit is issued that it must be put into effect. Wishart's was granted its frozen dessert permit months ago, but has not implemented any plans.

the pope," says Domecq, who rode the 17 miles from her hotel to the summer house on horseback. "But they didn't allow that."

During her visit with the pope, Domecq says he was "very interested" in Father Serra, and gave him a "special benediction" after looking at three pictures of her trip.

Domecq, who is seldom at a loss for words, says she was speechless during her audience with the pope.

"It was very emotional when I visited the pope," she says, in a soft voice. "I wanted to say so many things and I can't. He's like a father for everybody."

But one thing is for certain, Domecq has made a permanent mark on Carmel with her gift to the city. She also likes to point out that 385-pound statue can be enjoyed by everyone.

"This (statue) was to thank all of the Californian people for helping me," says Domecq, referring to her pilgrimage. "It's for everybody. I hope it stays forever — and when I die it will still be here."

Domecq is coy when asked whether she will be at the Carmel Mission when the pope arrives at 1 p.m. on Sept. 17. But Odello says she certain that Domecq will be in attendance.

"Yes, she's been invited," says Odello, with conviction. "I'm sure she'll be there."

Domecq just smiles — she's happy, the sun shines on Carmel.

Applicants sought for Point Sur Lightstation docents

APPLICATIONS ARE currently being accepted for volunteer docents at the Point Sur Lightstation.

Beginning this summer tours of Point Sur State Historic Park have been given by volunteer docent guides on a weekly basis. In order for the program to continue and gradually expand, more docents are needed, according to park rangers.

Training sessions will be held in September and October. They will include classes in the natural and cultural history of Point Sur and the Big Sur areas, field trips to other lighthouses, CPR certification, and attendance on Point Sur tours already being given. Docents volunteer a minimum of six hours per month year-round.

The purpose of the program is to provide an informative and pleasurable tour to interested visitors, as well as a rewarding experience for the docents, said rangers.

Those interested in becoming docents are encouraged to attend a tour prior to applying. Tours involve a 1/2-mile walk up a 300-foot rise in elevation. Highlands F.D. will conduct property inspections

IN LIGHT of the recent tragic fire in Pebble Beach, the Carmel Highlands Fire District is conducting a property inspection program.

The intent of this program is to educate residents on what they can do to help save their homes prior to or in the event of a fire, according to Lt. Gaudenz Panholzer, fire prevention officer. An additional benefit of this program is that the fire department will collect some basic information on each residence which will be useful in the event of a fire or other emergency, he said.

The inspections, which will begin Friday, Aug. 7th, will be conducted by members of the board of directors accompanied by one or more volunteer firemen. They will be donating their time, allowing the program to be done at a minimal cost to the taxpayers.

Inspectors will be looking for such things as a clean roof, sufficient clearance around structures, spark arrestors on chimneys, and other fire safety measures. Homeowners will then be provided with a list of recommended improvements which could better the home's chances of surviving a wildland fire. Although many of these suggestions are enforceable through the California Public Resources Code, the Health and Safety Code or the Uniform Fire Code, the fire district is hoping to gain voluntary compliance by educating homeowners on the benefits of the recommended measure, Panholzer said.

Any resident of the Carmel Highlands Fire District wishing more information should call the fire station at 624-2374; Non-residents wishing more information on protecting their homes should call their local fire department.

Water district releases dam EIR...reluctantly

By NANCY HILLS

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District has released its unedited copy of the more than 200-page environmental impact report/statement on the proposed New San Clemente Dam.

The report, which water district general manager Bruce Buel said still contains many errors and has ommissions, states that a dam on the Carmel River will provide for future water demands until the year 2020, adequate drought protection and restore much of the river's environment.

The major ommissions, Buel said, were to meet the federal requirements for an EIS. Much of the work has been done, but the report is not included.

The district had first refused to release the document for public scrutiny because it contained errors, but decided to release it after The Herald threatened legal action if it were not released immediately. The newspaper suggested that the district was appearing to hide something by not releasing the EIR right away.

A district press release stated that "The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is releasing this administrative draft only upon advice of counsel. The district continues to believe that publication of the text is more likely to mislead than educate the public and that the premature release of this unedited working draft is not in the public's interest."

An advisory vote on the project will be on the Nov. 3 ballot. The ballot measure will ask voters if they want the district to pursue the approximately $44 million dam project.

The completed and edited draft should be presented to the water board for its approval Sept. 14, Buel said. If approved, the public comment period on the document will start. Buel said the district expects to have a certified EIR/EIS in March or April of next year.

Originally, they had planned to conduct a workshop on the document Sept. 3, Buel said, but there was more work to do on the "first cut off the consultants' " word processor than had been expected, but added the nature of the work was not unusual for any first draft of a complicated report.

Buel said he did not expect any of the additions or revisions to change the report's conclusions.

The report discusses the impacts and results of the project, a 29,000 acre feet reservoir with additional wells and water treatment plant improvements and two alternatives: the same project with a 20,000 acre feet reservoir and and a 16,000 acre feet reservoir.

The EIR/EIS compiles at least four years of research and the results of numerous workshops and board meetings.

The summary of the main issues in the report includes:

- It would increase the water supply and reduce the probable months of rationing in a 36-month period from 10 months to 1 month with the 29,000 acre feet project, assuming unrestrained demand.
- No active faults pass through the site. Landslides into the reservior which could cause it to "overtop' is of a low probability but still a possibility.
- Water storage allows for releases into the river during the dry parts of the year which would increase groundwater levels. Currently, Carmel Valley wells draw water from the aquifer, which has reduced the groundwater levels.
- It will have little effect on water quality.
- There are no rare or endangered species that will be affected by the project, though 240 to 345 acres of undeveloped land would be inundated with the proposed project and alternatives.
- If and when improvements of the peninsula's infrastructure takes place and the communities' general and master plans, the project can create a potential for growth inducement. The changes in the plans would have to be for significantly more development than currently planned.

The nature of the project, however, is growth accomodating until the year 2020 rather than growth inducing.

- The project would cost the average residential water user $48 a year and commercial user $540 a year.
- It help to restore the steelhead trout population in the river.

Ups and downs of income stocks

DEAR BOYS in California:

I understand you've seen the sun out there on the peninsula for several days in a row. You tell me you're in a state of shock, haven't seen the fog for some time. Well, boys, I'm not sure I understand why sunshine in the summer is unusual but I'm just a country boy from Nebraska and find it difficult at times to understand you West Coast types.

I'm writing you now to get the answer to a question about some of my stocks. You know that I own some electric utilities and some regional phone stocks. What with the market at astronomical levels and all, I'm wondering why my utility and telephone stocks have actually gone down. Am I missing something or what?

Sincerely,
Halliburton G. Funnel

Dear Hal:

You raise a timely and often misunderstood issue. Why are your income stocks - and that's what electric and telephone stocks are - depressed when the stock market is soaring to 2600 on the Dow?

A good question. Don't most common stocks respond to the overall direction of the market?

Not necessarily. Utility stocks are income vehicles. People buy them for their dividends. Each year these stocks increase, or intend to increase, their dividends anywhere from 3 to 6 percent.

Now, if people perceive that interest rates are going down in the near future, they "buy" the dividend. That is, they lock in a good rate when they buy the stock. The wave of buying causes the stock price to go up. On the other hand, when folks feel rates may be going up, they "sell" a dividend (and the stock) that suddenly appears to be inadequate. Therefore, the prices of income stocks go up or down in response to interest rates and not in response to general stock market movements.

In a way, income stocks behave like bonds. But you should be aware of one major benefit income stocks have that bonds or CD's or money markets do not have. Namely, utility and telephone companies have a long track record of raising dividends every year. Or nearly every year! Therefore, an investor has a shot at appreciation of principal in addition to increasing income.

We're not saying you should rush out and buy these stocks today. But note the following:

If you purchased shares of Southern California Edison today, your income would be around 7 1/2 percent of your invested dollars.

Southern California Edison generally raises its dividend every year.

Interest rates have blipped up slightly during the past half year. If and when they start to fall, your shares of So Cal Ed will rise in response to the interest rate dropoff.

Income stocks have a peculiar life of their own. Investors in these stocks shouldn't contemplate buying or selling them because of radical moves in an overheated stock market.

Sincerely,
The Boys from California

Marine art 'Expo-sed'

THE VERY first Monterey Marine Art Expo — in what is hoped to be a long line of events — got off to an impressive start. The champagne reception and preview party for 500 works of marine art brought out nearly 300 of the top dignitaries and social leaders of the Monterey Peninsula.

Judges, mayors, district supervisors, leading attorneys, writers, television and communication personalities and social movers-and-shakers were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Gary Koeppel (who put the show together), and Mr. and Mrs. A. Cal Rossi, Jr. co-hosts for the preview grand opening in the Del Mar Ballroom of the Monterey Plaza Hotel. (Mr. Rossi is managing director of the Plaza.)

Guests were offered champagne and elegant hot and cold hors d'oeuvres and there were a few short speeches of official welcome by Mr. Rossi and Mr. Koeppel. Mr. K., who said this is the largest marine art exhibit ever assembled, presented Monterey Mayor Dan Albert with an otter poster by Richard Pettit of Hawaii. Also honored was Mr. Frank Crispo ("The Mayor of Cannery Row"), who ended his thank-you for the poster by saying, "Remember, God made only so much land but he never stopped making people."

Just before sunset guests walked up one flight of stairs to the pavilion on "The People's Plaza." Pavilion is an elegant word for tent, however, this one deserves the title as it is very large, has solid walls, and is carpeted.

The first art spotted by guests were the bronze whales of local sculptor Randy Puckett. They are stunning! Other artists are: painters Richard Ellis, Don McMichael, David Miller, Raymond Page, Richard Pettit and Michael Ward; etchers Anne London, John Ballou and James D. Mayhew; sculptors Greg and Gayle Appleby, Chris Bell, Winston Carmean, Miles Metzger, Don Pahl and Doug Wylie and photographer Chris Newbert.

The exhibit will be open daily until Sept. 31 from 9 a.m. to sunset and each week one or two of the artists will discuss their art and autograph posters in a "meet-the-artist" program. There is no admission for viewing.

SCOTTISH—AMERICAN WEEK

The Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula held a week-long heritage celebration with Monterey Mayor Dan Albert officially proclaiming it Scottish-American Week in front of Colton Hall, followed by music by the Royal Canadian Legion Band and lively Highland dancing.

The annual Caber March took place at Devendorf Park on the eve of the Highlands Games that were directed and planned so well by Roderick McKay. After the games on Saturday The Cheilidh was held in traditional Scottish manner in the Monterey Room at the fairgrounds.

Also on Saturday evening there was a quiet closing-week dinner party in the Pebble Beach home of Roderick Dewar (society president), and Mrs. Dewar. Patrick Reid, O.C. Consul General of Canada and Mrs. Reid were honored guests. Also attending were a few local folk who were born in Canada: Diane Hoar, Shirley Freschi, and T. Scott Moore, along with Douglas Graham (former society president), and Mrs. Graham.

Mr. Reid, honorary chieftain of the 20th annual Highlands Games in Monterey, made the presentations of awards. He has an impressive background. He emigrated to Canada from his native Ireland to work for Crawley Films and in advertising before going to the Department of Trade and Commerce. He was Commissioner General of the World Exposition 1986 and took his present position in San Francisco in 1986 with a region that covers the West from the Dakotas to Colorado. He even helped to design the maple leaf flag.

IS IT TOO EARLY TO THINK OF VALENTINES?

It just had to happen. Even as the bachelor auction (by Frohman Fans) began, we wondered how long it would be before the ladies were asked to follow suit. It has happened and is now definitely in the works.

To make it all the more romantic, Valentine's Day weekend (the 12th), has been chosen by the Monterey Bay Symphony for an "old-fashioned box social" and bachelorette auction. For those who can't remember those box socials here's the way it went...a fellow would bid on a "box banquet" (often highly decorated to make it enticing) prepared by a young lady unknown to him. He kept his fingers crossed that the lady would be the one who made his heart beat faster. The suspense was the built-in excitement.

That same suspense will prevail when 36 bachelorettes (in three age groups), will offer date packages (the "box lunch") listed in a book with soft-focus photos (to be out right after Christmas). Soooo, again the "package date" is purchased with the same suspense and hope.

Contributing sponsor is Country Home Care and planners are Margarite Alvarez and Judy Higgerson (of CHC), George Reith, and Ron Weitzman. So, bachelorettes you may call 372-676 for info and/or to present your date package for this old-fashioned box social updated.

BISHOP THADDEUS SHUBSDA'S THOUGHTS ON THE POPE'S VISIT

With the momentous once-in-a-lifetime visit to Carmel by His Holiness Pope John Paul II on Sept. 17th, we were granted time with the most Rev. Thaddeus Shubsda D.D., bishop of the Diocese of Monterey.

This tall gracious bishop received us in the Papal Visit Office just before his July vacation. The interview follows...

How long have you been in Monterey as bishop?

"I have been a Bishop here since July 1, 1982, the installation date. I was an auxiliary bishop in the archdiocese in Los Angeles before I came here. I had been a bishop there for over five years having been ordained a bishop in February 1977."

How and when did you decide on a career in the church?

"It was an early decision. To be a priest was a desire of mine since the time I was in second-grade. It was not until I was in the ninth-grade that I was able to apply and be accepted in what in those days was called the minor (or junior) seminary. It was a school comprised of six years of study including four years of high school. The years that I went there we had to travel back and forth by bus from home to school every day. It was not a boarding school. Now, it is a boarding school and it only has four years of study. It was called Los Angeles College, located on the west side of Los Angeles, built in the year 1926. Then, around 1964 it was rebuilt on a new site in the city of San Fernando and is called the Lady Queen of Angels Seminary now."

Did you grow up in Los Angeles?

"Yes. I was born and raised in Los Angeles."

Are you personally acquainted with His Holiness?

"I wouldn't say we are acquainted. We have met on official occasions. But I am not someone who visits him or meets with him. I didn't do that when he was a cardinal in Cracow and I certainly don't do that now that he is a pope. But I have met him on a number of occasions.

Were these occasions here or in Europe?

"I met him here in 1976 when he was a cardinal. I met him in Los Angeles. The other time was when he was a pope. That was in Rome in his summer home. These were all very brief meetings."

What do you think was the deciding factor for his visit to Carmel?

"The bishops of California submitted (each bishop), to a committee of three bishops: Archbishop Mahoney (Los Angeles), Cardinal Manning (L.A.) and Archbishop Quinn (San Francisco) our reasons for asking the Holy Father to come to our area of California. The three bishops decided that we bishops of California as a unit invite the Holy Father to come to Los Angeles, to the Monterey Peninsula and to San Francisco. Monterey was added because of the historical significance of Father Serra's making the Carmel Mission his headquarters when he was the president of the missions and the fact that he lies buried in Carmel Mission.

"I think it is significant that he is coming here."

What do you suggest people to in preparation for this once-in-a-lifetime visit?

"What we have done for the Catholic population is we have sent out a number of suggestions for prayers. For example, there are those people who are devoted to the Rosary. We have given them from the Acts of the Apostles certain recorded instances when St. Peter made visits to different people in the Holy Land. And we would ask the people to reflect on those visits remembering that the Holy Father is the successor of St. Peter. So that they would try to get the flavor of what St. Peter's visit did in those days and we would hope that the Holy Father's visit will do in our day.

"What spiritual benefits might each one of us derive from his coming among us, in view of the fact of what he is going to say, in view of the fact of what he is going to encourage us to be and to do as far as our religious practice.

"We have also prepared a series of intercessory prayers for those who recite what is known as the Liturgy of the Hours of the Divine Office. Priests and religious men and women that will be included in their morning and evening prayers. We have a whole series of intercessory prayers for each day of the week to be included in that part of the mass when people enunciate particular intentions, particular requests. So we sent those out to all the parishes to be used.

"We are encouraging people to pray, we are encouraging people to reflect. What is the significance in each one of our lives in that Pope John Paul II, the Vicar of Christ, the successor of St. Peter, coming to Monterey? And that significance of course, hopefully will carry on in the days and months and years to come, and that it will not be something that we think about and participate in just for that day and forget about it."

What are your own personal feeling and reactions to the visit?

"One of the first things — I have a great sense of gratitude that this is being made possible for the people of this area. There are so many places that he could have gone. We are blessed with the fact that the decision was made for him to come here.

"Another thought that I had was the thought of hope. I hope that his coming among us is going to be a source of inspiration, of encouragement in our efforts to live the Christian life. I have a feeling of awe at the great amount of work that is required to make this possible and the number of people involved in making all these preparations. So those are some of the sentiments that I have personally."

He has a grueling schedule doesn't he?

"Yes. There is provision made for him to have some time for rest and repose, but nevertheless it is constant. And it will be constant for all the days that he is in the country."

How long is his entire visit?

"I believe is it nine days."

Will you know ahead of time if Father Serra will be elevated to sainthood?

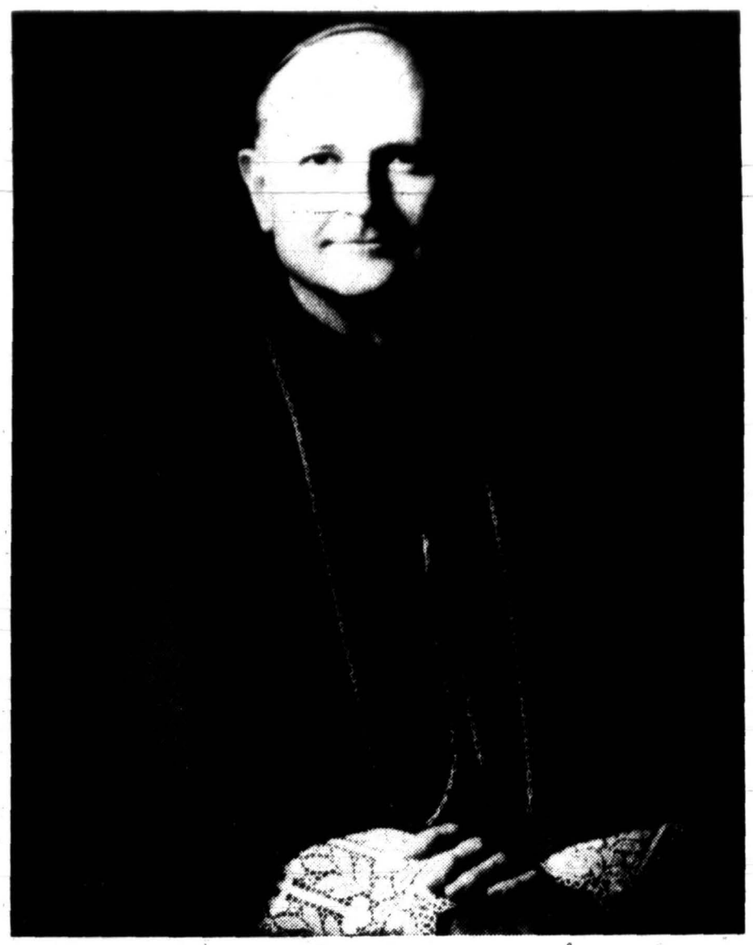
"I hope I will be informed whatever the decision is. When I will be informed I don't know. I think I will be."

Do you know if the Holy Father's message in the mission will contain a special message for Carmel?

"I have no way of knowing what the contents or what the thrust of the words of the Holy Father will be. He has received information concerning Father Serra. He is going to be made aware that Father Serra is buried there. What he will center his remarks around I don't know. But from my own personal experience from listening to the Holy Father and reading many of his talks I am always impressed by the fact that he is giving everybody a great opportunity to reflect and to think and to meditate on what it is that God is conveying to us. What it is that God wants us to appreciate and to learn and to cherish. That seems to be his constant insistance so that we won't take for granted the goodness of God in our lives.

"We are not a big diocese. I would venture to say that we are the smallest diocese that he is going to visit in the United States. I am struck by the fact that he is not just going to the major metropolitan areas exclusively. That he is willing to come to an area that is not very populated but that has a great significance in the history of California.

"I am awestruck that we have been chosen."



THE MOST Rev. Thaddeus Shubsda, bishop of the Diocese of Monterey.

CARMEL JEWELER AWARDED REGISTERED JEWELER TITLE BY THE AMERICAN GEM SOCIETY

Carol D. Andrews of Sun Studios Jewelry, Carmel Plaza, has been awarded the title of "Registered Jeweler" by the American Gem Society.

The society, an association of fine jewelers pledged to consumer protection and gemological education, awards the title to member jewelers who obtain advanced professional knowledge and skill through hands-on experience, gemological courses and annual examinations.

Andrews received a gemological diploma from the Gemological Institute of America. She became interested in gemology through her husband, Lee, who owns the firm with her. They opened Sun Studios in 1984 where Andrews is involved in buying, selling, designing and appraising fine jewelry.

President William G. Underwood of the American Gem Society said, "I want to congratulate Andrews on achieving a level of skill reached only by some 1,350 retail jewelers in the United States and Canada. She has qualified as a registered jeweler through her personal desire to increase her knowledge of gemology and through the store's subscribing to business principles set down by the Federal Trade Commission, Better Business Bureau and the society's own code of ethics."

SEA OTTER WAVES SCHEDULE AUGUST MEETING

Plans have been made for all former and active duty Navy women to attend a meeting at the Ramada Inn, Saturday, Aug. 8, at 11:30 a.m. Lunch will be served. President Jewel D. Toepel announced that she will be making a report of the activities of the Navy Women's National Convention which she attended in Chicago in July.

Three new members who joined the group at the June meeting included: Bernice K. Benadom, Salinas; Jean Ellen Garcia, Salinas; and Margaret L. Richards, Pacific Grove.

Arrangements will be discussed for an October trip to the Monterey Bay Aquarium with visiting members of the San Francisco Golden Gate Waves.

Luncheon and meeting reservations may be made by calling Dorothy Biller or Jewel Toepel as soon as possible.

NEW VESTRY FOR ALL SAINTS'

As part of the process of restructuring and renewal, a new Vestry of eight lay persons, headed by Father Robert E. Fosse, rector, has been announced by All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel. The vestry, according to Episcopal Church polity, acts as the board of directors of the church corporation, monitoring its financial affairs and its relations with its clergy and congregation. The new members are Patricia Arthur, Stephen Grant, Patricia McEldowney, Ian McPhail, Frederick Riebe and George Rommel, all of Carmel; and Faith Conklin and William Provost, both of Monterey. Provost was named senior warden, McEldowney is clerk, and Robert Priestley, of Carmel continues as the church's treasurer. A junior warden will be elected in late August.

Continuing the observance of its 75th anniversary as a parish, the vestry will constitute a long-range planning committee in September, widely representative of the membership of the congregation. The new committee will address programmatic and physical planning for the next several years. Among the far reaching issues to be faced by the group include church growth, outreach, and the material and spiritual needs of the congregation, including music and liturgical space.

All Saints' has founded two congregations on the Monterey Peninsula, St. Matthias, Seaside, and St. Dunstan's, Carmel Valley. In 1961 the vestry founded a parish day school, now known as All Saints' Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley. All Saints' also owns the Santa Lucia Mission and campground in Big Sur. The parish's first home later became the present Carmel City Hall.

CARMEL VALLEY MAN NAMED TO U.S. GORDON TROPHY TEAM

Will Gahagan of the Carmel Valley Racquet Club has again named to the U.S. Gordon Trophy team, which since 1948 has played an international match against a Canadian team, composed of senior players ranging from ages 45 to 70 and over. This is the third time he has been selected for the U.S. team, sponsored by the U.S. Tennis Association.

The matches were played in Toronto July 31-Aug.1 at the Cricket & Curling Club, and included 21 events in singles and doubles. In previous meetings in 1984-85, Gahagan was undefeated in his 70's doubles matches, and the U.S. squad won the overall event by a one-match margin.

With 83-year-old Gerry Turner of San Andreas, Gahagan won the 75's men's doubles at the Feast of Lanterns Pacific Grove tourney on Sunday, upsetting top-seeded Harley English and John Light of Sacramento 6-3 and 6-4.

VNA OFFERS HIGH-TECH HOME CARE

Joseph Brown, R.N., of the Visiting Nurse Association, has recently completed the requirements to become a Certified Registered Nurse of Intravenous Therapy (C.R.N.I.).

Brown passed the medical exam given by the National Intravenous Therapy Association last month, which certifies him to give such specialized care as chemotherapy treatments, blood transfusions, hydration therapy and I.V. antibiotics in the patient's home. "Certification is important because it enables caregivers to provide the highest quality health care and raises the standards by which all nurses are judged," says Brown. "Intravenous therapy is a relatively new field for home care providers, so quality controls are important."

Brown's next step is to become an oncology nurse specialist. "Since most illness that I see is of a very serious nature, the

CARMEL YOUTH BASEBALL

BY MARY PARSONS

THE COAST Section Bronco All-Star tournament held at Larsen Field July 23 through 26 was won by Carmel; the hometown boys were undefeated in three exciting games.

The victors now go on to further action in Pacific Grove's West Zone Bronco tournament Aug. 6-9; Carmel plays in the first game tonight (Aug. 6) at 5:30.

Carmel began as they meant to continue in the tournament opener, beating Pacific Grove 7-2 on July 23. Pitcher Willie Moore went the seven-inning distance for the winners, striking out 10 batters and allowing no runs after the second inning. Catcher Matt Travaille turned in a fine performance, including a dramatic tag at the plate to deprive PG of scoring a much-needed run. Good defense by Carmel included outfield strength by Mark Brophy and Jeremy Byrd, and infield skill by Frank Melicia, Ranon Masliyah and David Palshaw. Leading hitter Steve Biliouris was 2-for-3 with a double; teammayes Masliyah and Jon Bohlman hit RBI singles, and Damian Griss had an RBI. For PG, Jon Eandi and Brian Honegger had doubles and Scott Berti had a single. Pacific Grove's pitching staff was headed by Eandi and included Honegger, David Neff and Tyrone Hardenstein.

In the second game, Monterey defeated Seaside 11-4. Mark Williams pitched the entire game, allowing only six hits and striking out 10; he also doubled. Teammate Vito Aiello (2-for-4) was the leading hitter and was responsible for two putouts in centerfield late in the game to stop a Seaside rally. Miles Woodard also showed defensive talent for the victors with a diving, somersault catch on the first base line.

Seaside and Pacific Grove went into extra innings in the loser's bracket game July 25; Seaside won it 8-7 in the ninth. Pacific Grove led the game until Seaside's John Wilkerson sparked a rally with a two-run homer in the sixth and then did it again in the seventh to tie the score. Jamell Damon drove in the winning run with an RBI single in the ninth. Also hitting well were Joaquin Livingston (2-for-4) and Nate Williams (who doubled). Jon Eandi (2-for-4) was leading hitter for PG and teammate Conn Stanfield doubled. Winning pitcher for Seaside was Dontie Addison.

Nine innings were needed again for Carmel to defeat Monterey in the winners' bracket game July 25; the final score was 9-8. David Palshaw's sacrifice fly drove in Willie Moore for the winning run. Steve Biliouris and Frank Melicia had two hits each for the winners; Melicia also doubled. Moore was the Carmel, however, went on to win the game 7-2 as well as the championship game against Monterey by a 5-3 tally. The Carmel team now enters the Western Zone Bronco playoffs set for PG Aug. 6-9. Monterey eliminated Seaside in the first game July 26 by a score of 10-7. Pitcher Mark Williams struck out 13 as he went the distance for the winners. Seaside's Dontie Addison was 2-for-4 with a two-run homer and a double; teammate Dennis Thomas was 2-for-3. Justin Clymo had two hits for Monterey.

Carmel emerged victorious in the final game, taking the Coast Section Bronco title for the first time in 12 years. Monterey led the game until the seventh inning when a bunt by Mark Brophy scored Willie Moore, and David Palshaw stole home to tie the score and send the game into extra innings. Palshaw then turned pitcher and held Monterey scoreless. Steve Biliouris, Carmel's leading hitter in every game, smashed a two-run double in the eighth for the win. Top batters for Monterey were Vito Aiello (3-for-4) and Justin Clymo (2-for-3). Winning pitcher Frank Melicia struck out seven.

THEY THINK SO TOO

The proposition of making the Serra celebration at Carmel an annual event is a capital idea. It ought to enlist the hearty support of peninsula people. Carmel is something different, it is a distinct asset to California. It is a little apart from the material and the commercial. Here in free open spaces, with the murmur of the pines and the boom of the billows, the spirit of man finds room to expand and genius gets a new inspiration. - Monterey Cypress.

TO DEDICATE CELL OF SERRA AUG. 29

Beatification and canonization of Padre Junipero Serra, whose burial place at Carmel Mission is one of the chief points of interest on the Monterey Peninsula, is to be strongly pressed following a celebration at the Mission on Sunday, Aug. 29, at which the restored cell of Father Serra will be dedicated. This day follows the 150th anniversary of the death of Father Serra, and this anniversary will be fittingly observed.

The cause of beatification and canonization, long silently engaging the attention of California admirers of Father Serra, will be launched in a systematic way in this year's celebration, with the view of introducing it to Rome.

GRAVE CRISIS FOR SMALL BUSINESS

The struggle of small business to keep its head above water received another grievious setback last Thursday.

It was a very small business indeed. Shortly after setting up shop, the enterprise was closed down by a deputy sheriff on the grounds that the management had not taken out a business license.

The merchants involved were four children, Teryl McBride, 12, Bolton Colburn, 7, and Cyrus Colburn, 6, who had entered into a limited partnership with Vicki Holman, 12, to sell vegetables grown in their gardens, and some painted tiles, at the side of the road.

While the Pine Cone was unable to interview the merchants themselves because they are reportedly in seclusion, their spokesman, Mr. Sam Colburn, confirmed the information, but would not divulge whether an appeal is being considered.

The business was being run from two orange crated mounted on a wagon. Whether or not this structure was approved by the county planning commission or the facilities were approved by the county health officer is being investigated, together with the question of overtime parking.

BIKE RACKS ON THE BACK OF MPT BUSES? MAYBE

There may be some new two-wheeled riders hopping the backs of Monterey Peninsula Transit buses next summer.

Bicycles.

The MPT board of directors is considering, at the urging of Arthur McEwen of Carmel, the feasiblity of installing bike racks on all 15 newer buses - most of which serve Carmel.

The project, including equipment, labor, liability costs and maintenance, could cost upwards of $30,000, according to Thomas D. Albert, MPT general manager.

A similar demonstrator project has met good success in San Diego, says an independent report. Like San Diego, MPT will apply for funds from the state Department of Transportation.

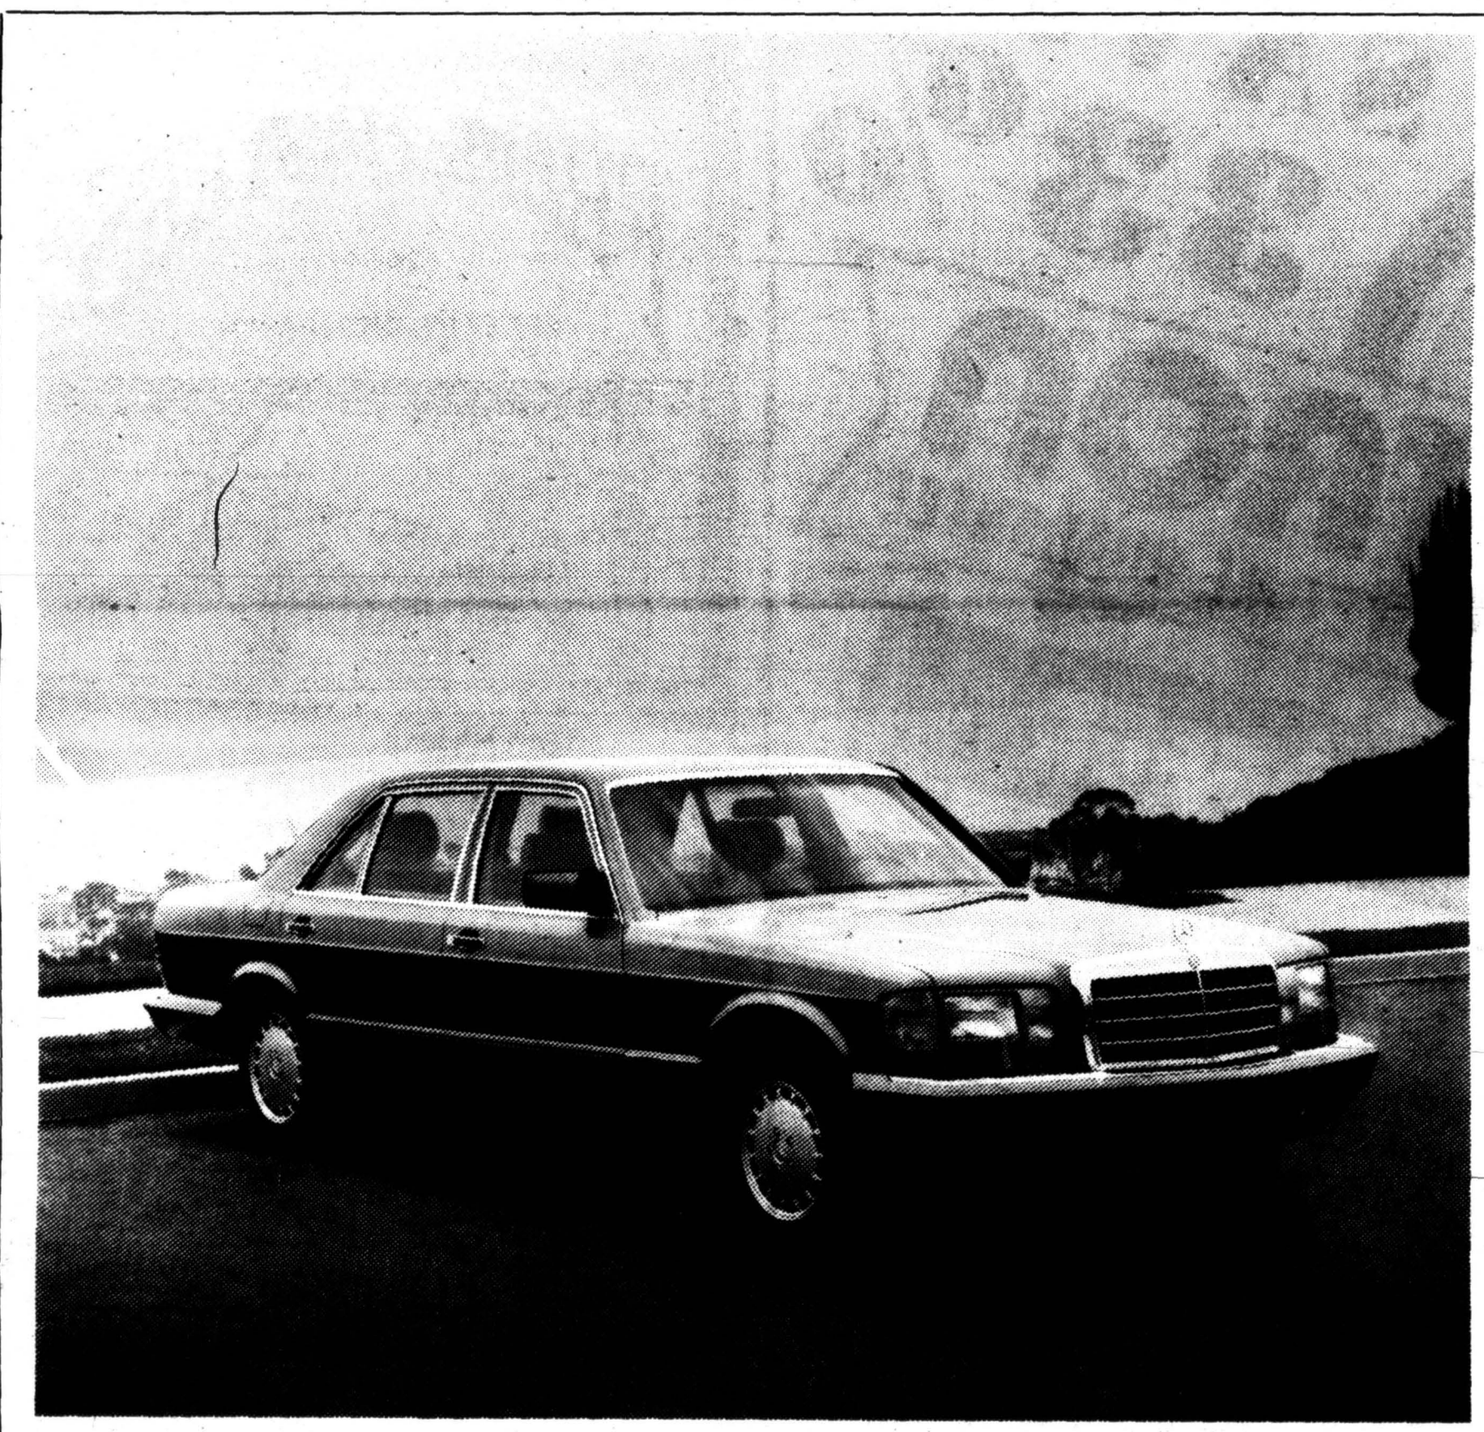
"COOPERATION" RESULTS IN ROAD PROJECT IN VALLEY

A road construction project just west of Carmel Valley Village is a "living example" that government and private residents can cooperate for mutual benefits, says Monterey County Fifth District Supervisor William Peters.

Work is expected to be completed Sept. 1 on a left hand turn channelization project at the intersection of Ford and Carmel Valley Roads. It would never have been started without the cooperation of area property owners, Peters said.



Beware of costly imitations.

There have been many attempts to imitate the cars of the Mercedes-Benz S-Class. This is hardly surprising, since the "big Mercedes" has long been the standard the rest of the world emulates.

But though many of the imitations have been well executed, when all is said and done, they are still just imitations. And for those who are committed to the utmost in quality engineering, who cannot abide second best in anything they do or own, only the original will suffice.

As might be expected, we who sell and service a car of this quality must be dealers of equal quality. We must be dedicated to standards that match those of the people who have chosen to make Mercedes-Benz their car. And our staffs must consist of trained and experienced professionals ready to do everything possible to extend the special feeling of owning an S-Class car far beyond the car itself.

This is the way it must be. Come in and see us. We're your authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer and we believe that when only the best will do, there is no room for imitation.

Like no other dealers in the world.

See your authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer.

CARMEL YOUTH COMPLETES WORLD TOUR

Kimberly Wright of Carmel-by-the-Sea has just completed a 12-month world tour in Up With People, the independent, nonprofit, educational and cultural organization.

Up With People maintains five casts each with 100 international students who, during the year-long program, travel approximately 32,000 miles to some 90 cities throughout the United States and Europe.

In each city they visit, a two-hour musical production is staged and performed by the cast. As a member of Cast C, Wright spent the first part of the year traveling throughout the Western United States. In early 1987 Cast C toured the Middle Atlantic states before departing for Europe in April. In Europe, Wright and Cast C traveled through Belgium, the Netherlands, Austria and Germany before the tour ended in June.

Each student in Up With People experienced the unique opportunity of living with approximately 80 host families during the year, thus seeing those cities and experiencing the customs and cultures through a personal perspective.

Wright now joins more than 10,000 Up With People alumni worldwide. It is the hope of Up With People that the former participants in the program will take with them the global friendships and experiences and make lasting contributions to their communities.

Widely known for its dynamic, high-energy entertainment, Up With People's aim is to encourage understanding among people everywhere.

Banners, spirits fly high at children's parade

BANNERS AND spirits were flying high during the Carmel Bach Festival's annual children's parade and concert last week. The parade, led by two Bach Fest "pied pipers" started at Devendorf Park and wound its way through Carmel to Sunset Center, where children were treated to a special concert given by the Cambridge Buskers musical group. (Holly McFarland photos.)

BACH FESTIVAL banners were unfurled in all their glory during the annual children's parade through the streets of Carmel.

OBITUARIES

REV. VERA Haywood of Chicago assumes her new position as minister of the Monterey Church of Religious Science Sunday, Aug. 9. She will give her first lecture at the 11 a.m. service that day.

Church gains new minister

Rev. Vera Haywood of Chicago assumes her new position as minister of the Monterey Church of Religious Science, Sunday, Aug. 9. She will give her first lecture at the 11 a.m. service that day.

Haywood was elected June 7 to the ministerial position at a special meeting of the membership of the Monterey Church of Religious Science. She recently served as Minister of Chicago's Beverly-South Shore Church of Religious Science.

A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., she received her degree in research chemistry from Brooklyn College in 1954, studied radioisotopes at New York City Community College, and received her ministerial license through New York's First Church of Religious Science under the direction of Dr. Raymond Charles Barker and Dr. Eric Pace.

From 1956 to 1963 she was engaged in work with radiochemistry. Between 1965 and 1978 she became actively involved in medically-oriented chemical research, particularly relative to Sickle Cell Anemia's anatomy, causes and effects, and genetic counseling. In 1975 she was licensed as a Religious Science Practitioner and received her minister's appointment in 1978.

As program coordinator and assistant to Dr. Eric Pace, she developed Science of Mind workshops and seminars in the United States and abroad. She is the founder of the "New Age Practitioners," a group of licensed Religious Scientists who explore all avenues of spiritual development and various aspects of self-awareness. She taught courses in New York and Chicago and held classes on the practical aspects of Religious Science at Long Island University in Brooklyn. It is Haywood's belief that Science of Mind is useful in all phases of life and she has conducted seminars for industrial, educational and institutional organizations. Her basic theory is that awareness breeds control, thus allowing an individual to become the captain of his own fate.

Haywood's goals include expansion of her instructing horizons to better serve students of higher learning institutions, human resource development seminars for executives and productivity and self-awareness workshops for employees. A particular focus at this time is reaching the adult female population with her personal development workshops.

Haywood will conduct her first workshop, "Take It From The Top," from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 22 in the auditorium of the Monterey Church of Religious Science. It will deal with metaphysics and how one can use it to better their lives, how to eliminate negative experiences and how to use one's creativity more effectively. The workshop is open to everyone and tuition is $15.

Haywood begins teaching Science of Mind (the study of Religious Science) classes Tuesday, Sept. 15 and Wednesday, Sept. 16.

For additional information, call Nick Rekas, church administrator, at 372-7326.

PROPHECY CORNER

By Phil Lunsford

Signs of the time Part 2

In the Old Testament book of Daniel, in chapter seven, the prophet Daniel had a vision in which he saw four beasts. The first beast was like a lion, the second like a bear, the third like a leopard and the fourth had iron teeth and 10 horns. Daniel studied the horns and another little horn came up among them. The little horn plucked up three of the 10 horns.

Daniel lacked understanding of the vision, so it was explained to him by an angel. The four beasts were four kings that would arise and would rule over Israel. History teaches us that the four kings were of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome. The 10 horns would be future kings that would arise. The little horn would be a king that would become leader of the 10 kings. He would subdue three of the kings replacing them with himself and two other kings.

An in-depth study of prophecy reveals that the 10 kings are a revived Roman empire. The fourth beast was the Roman Empire during Jesus' time. Chapter 13 of Revelation refers to the 10 kings as being in power during the great tribulation period.

The European Common Market presently has twelve nations as members, with Austria wanting to join, then the membership would be 13. These nations were part of the old Roman Empire except for Denmark and Ireland. Greece has become an unstable member. The forthcoming ruling king (anti-christ) will probably remove these three nations, which will bring the total number back to 10. These nations are undoubtedly the revived Roman Empire. Next week part 3.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

The philosophy of Coolidge Feast of Cure d'Avs

Aug. 4, La Playa

My mother and father were born in 1870, which makes them contemporaries of Calvin Coolidge, the 30th president of the United States and the arch-typical Vermont Yankee. My parents accepted and took for granted the moral aphorisms he uttered from time to time.

Dr. Joe Grey gave me a copy of an editorial from the U.S. New and World Report which praised the president on his 110th birthday just a month ago today. Allow me to quote from his homespun philosophy:

"If all folks in the United Stated would do the few simple things they know they ought to do, most of our big problems would take care of themselves.

"It has always seemed to me that common sense is the real solvent for nations' problems at all times; common sense and hard work.

"The American ideal is right. It is everlastingly right. What our country needs is the moral power to hold on to it."

Oh Lord, help us to return to the simple and tried principles of New England from which as individuals and as a nation we have strayed.

Calvin Coolidge said "There is no right to strike against public safety by anybody, anywhere, anytime." Americans have struck against so many of our ideas and ideals. My parents would be shocked and appalled by today's strike against public safety and public morality. I have not been immunized nor inoculated against the shock of moral decadance! Have you?

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Memory loss in older people is not nearly so great as had been widely assumed by psychologists, according to a new report from the American Psychological Association. One reason that older people were thought to suffer memory loss, say the researchers, was that tests were poorly designed, dealing with trivial questions. When the tests were redesigned to deal with real-life situations, older people did much better.

According to psychologists at the University of New Orleans, a type of "selective forgetfulness" is used by seniors to deal with the vast amount of information to which they're exposed. Older people, said the report, may be better at deciding what is not worth remembering and discarding it. According to the research, one type of memory that seems to increase rather than decrease as we get older is that for general information, such as vocabulary.

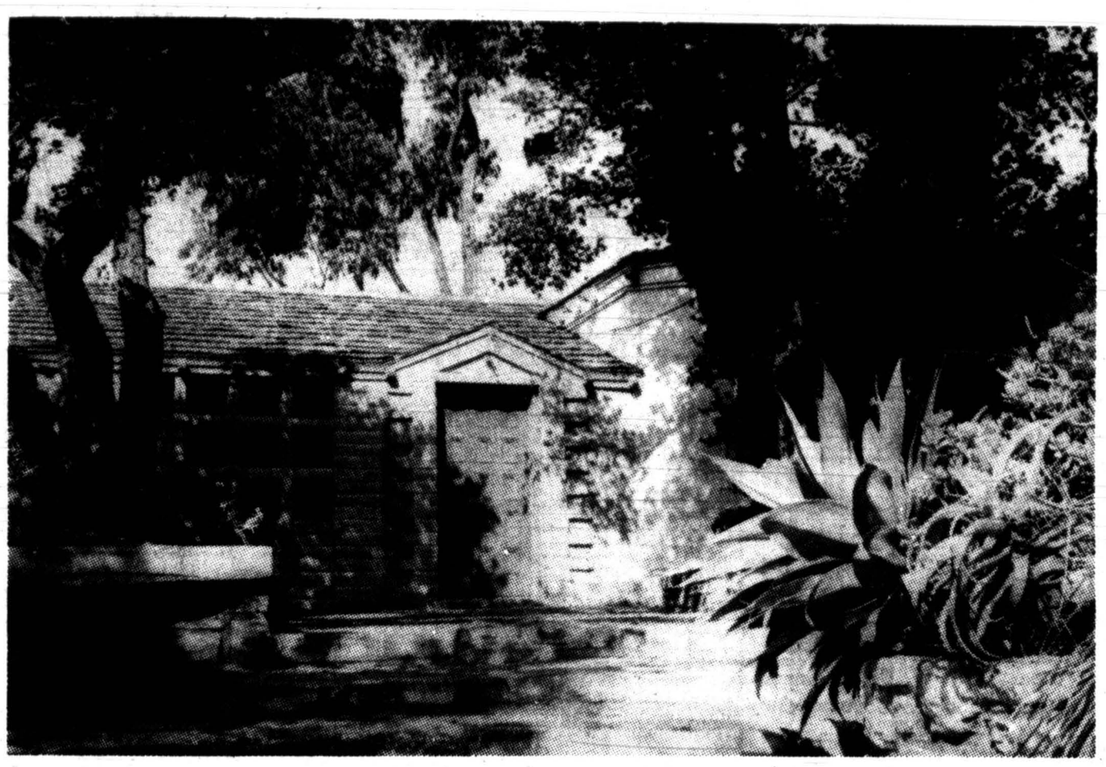
Carmel Art Association pays tribute to 60 yrs.

By KEVIN SAMSON

THE GHOST of Ira Remson just might be heard laughing in the shadows when the Carmel Art Association (CAA) celebrates its 60th anniversary on Saturday, Aug. 8.

Remson, a flamboyant individual given to flowing capes and rhyming pentameter — a character once described as someone out of an F. Scott Fitzgerald story — at one time lived in the building that for more than 50 years has been the home of the CAA.



HOME OF the 60-year-old Carmel Art Association on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth streets, the building was once inhabited by Ira Remson, one of Carmel's most famous eccentrics.

Brenda Morrison, current association president, and Gael Donovan, association director, brought up Remson's name when discussing some of the history of the long-lived CAA.

It seems that Remson took his own life at the expense of a bullet, thus leading to new ownership of the eight-room building located on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth, and soon after to ownership by the fledgling art association.

Morrison explains that before the members were able to auction enough paintings to come up with a downpayment for the building, they had to show their work in the rented space of the Seven Arts Building, still located on the corner of Ocean and Lincoln.

Unlike today, members in the late '20s and early '30s did not live in the Carmel area, at least not year-round. "Many were from Southern California but would spend part of the year here," says Donovan, the association's honorary historian.

Today, there are 132 members of the Carmel Art Association, and all are required to live within 35 miles of town.

"What we offer the public," says Morrison, "is local artists. Most galleries bring their work in from all over."

A jurying is held twice a year at which time new members are brought in. "This way we are constantly seeing new blood; we're a very alive organization," says Morrison.

As part of its 60-year celebration, the association is showing works by members during the organization's first 10 years. These are on loan from private and corporate collections and include pieces by Armin Hansen (first CAA president and one of nine CAA academicians), Percy Gray, William Ritschel, Abel Warshawsky and Myron Oliver.

In accordance with the festivities, the Carmel Post Office will issue a special first-day cover cancellation commemorating the CAA founding. The first-day covers will be on sale at the CAA beginning Aug. 8.

The association will also host an open house on that day.

Works by the original members will not be for sale. "It's a tribute to those people who made this all possible," says Morrison. "It's unusual because we are a selling gallery. We thought it would be a nice way to say, thank you."

BESIDES BEING a gallery where members may show and sell their work, the building is also used for a variety of community events throughout the year, including the annual Carmel Bach Festival, films and lectures. Most of these are free.

"We're lucky we paid off the mortgage in the '40s so we can afford to offer our services to the community," says Morrison.

One service the CAA offers is an art scholarship to a local graduating high school student who will be attending art school.

When asked the reason for the Carmel Art Association's longevity, Morrison replied, "Because we're owned and operated by artists."

Monterey hosts largest Marine Art Expo ever

By KEVIN SAMSON

AFTER FOUR successful years in Maui, Carmel's Gary Koeppel is bringing the Marine Art Expo home.

Home is the Monterey Peninsula, where he has organized the first annual Monterey Marine Art Expo '87 at the Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row. The art exhibit runs through Sept. 30.

"It's like a Broadway show," Koeppel draws the analogy. The marine expos in Maui were similar to off-Broadway, he says. "We've worked all the bugs out and now we're bringing a world-class show to the peninsula. I think the people are in for a real surprise."

Koeppel — owner of Coast Galleries in Pebble Beach, Maui and Big Sur — believes this expo is the largest marine art exhibition ever assembled. More than 400 pieces by 14 artists are on display and for sale, from paintings to woodwork.

"It's both a commercial and fund-raising venture," says Koeppel, who raised $30,000 in three years at expos in Maui, not to mention $25,000 this year alone for the conservation-oriented Cousteau Society.

Realistically, Koeppel expects to put between $40,000 and $50,000 into the pockets of marine-ecology projects, including the Cousteau Society, from the Monterey show alone.

A highlight of Monterey Marine Art Expo will be the world premiere of Jean-Michel Cousteau's new film, At the Edge of a Human Tide, Sept. 12 at the Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum. "Ted Turner may be here for the film," says Koeppel, referring to the Atlanta-based media mogul who owns his own TV network (CNN), pro baseball and basketball teams, and has contributed to various causes.

Cousteau, son of famed marine ecologist and adventurer Jacques Cousteau, focuses on the California harbor seals and sea otters of the Channel Islands and Monterey Bay in the film. He traces two baby seals that were released — following rehabilitation — from the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

The question the film raises, says Koeppel, is, if we can't manage something as small as a Channel Island, then how are we going to protect our own planet?

GARY KOEPPEL of Carmel has assembled a most impressive array of the finest marine art for Monterey Marine Art Expo 87 at the Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row.

There are 500 seats available for viewing the the film at the Steinbeck Forum, on a first-come, first-served basis. The $20 donation goes entirely to the Cousteau Society.

Koeppel believes it's fitting to hold the expo in Monterey, what with all the marine ecology activity, including the aquarium. "It's ironic," he says, "that Hawaii and the Monterey Bay were once major whaling centers and now are at the heart of the whale conservation movement."

An art dealer as well as former craftsman, Koeppel explains that marine art has been evolving in recent years, "it's never really been done before."

"Oh, sure, there've been seascapes and maritime art but this is different. Jacques Cousteau and people like him have been

BENT on artistic collusion course

IS IT theater? Music? Or art?

The group BENT would rather not be pigeon-holed. But you can find out where they fit on your scale when BENT performs at 9 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 12, at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center in New Monterey.

Originating in 1981, BENT has continued to provide a unique alternative to normality, according to a statement released by the "underground" group.

BENT credits the San Francisco art/rock group The Residents for some of its inspiration. Their performances are always different, say aficionados.

BENT has appeared in many formations, ranging from the avant garde country and western singing in its seminal cowboy hit I Can Tell You've Never Been to Texas, to a mini orchestra performing the dramatic BENT Overture.

Never satisfied, BENT is forever adding to its repertoire, adding such appliances as multiple wide-screen video projectors and DBX Surround Sound.

BENT's Aug. 12 performance is entitiled "Home on the Strange." Tickets are available at Record Asylum, 576 Lighthouse Ave., Monterey for $5, or $6 at the door.

THEATER REVIEW

By Joe Guzaitis

Spaghetti Shakespeare

JAMES DUNN, frequent director of Shakespeare adaptations in our area, has brought us this year — are you ready — a "spaghetti western" version of The Taming of the Shrew. Dedicated to John Ford, Howard Hawks, Sergio Leone, Clint Eastwood, John Wayne and other western movie heros of his youth, it is presented as a labor of love and a tribute to the American West of the silver screen. Curiosity abounds as to Mayor Eastwood's reaction to this offerings of a rambunctious retelling of Shakespeare's tale of wit and woo.

I found the production great fun. And for those that ask about such broad adaptations, I say fie. If you don't like the setting, close your eyes and the Bard's language will wash over you as it always has. Dunn has not changed the script (except for minor abridgements) and it amazes me how much of it sounds so right for the period. Taming of the Shrew is a robust tale and can stand vigorous handling.

The company has a lot of old favorities in it: Bill Lindsey, who plays Kate's father (recently seen as Franz Joseph in Amadeus) gives us his usually energetic and enjoyable performance as the man with two marriageable daughters on his hands. The younger has a suitor but cannot marry until the older is wed. This curious custom adds the fuel of desperation to the plot. In addition, Kate, the older daughter is a shrew, a more polite term than we use now. A suitable husband must be found who can subdue her and bring happiness to all. A tall order. Kate is played by a saucy Dorian Ellis (who gave us a very good Maxine in Night of the Iguana). She doesn't miss a beat in getting Kate's sass across to the world. Petruchio is the answer to this dilemma, of course ,and David Miller does him justice. David recently appeared as Oberon in the Theaterfest production of Midsummer Night's Dream. He appears here to subdue Kate but there are sufficient ambiguities in the last few scenes that allow for lattitude of interpretation.

There are many good supporting roles that bear mention: Gwyneth Hovick as Bianac, the younger daughter; Larry Welch as the town undertaker; Keith Decker, all in black, as a stranger (but we know better); Tommie Bates, also in Theaterfest, as Bianca's successful suitor; Ron Cohen as Grumio, servant to Petruchio, and played as a Mexican bandito. Ron has been in a number of productions lately (Duet for One, Normal Heart, Nuts) and performed well in all, but he really runs away with this one. His Grumio livens this production so much that the performers around him enjoy him as much as we do.

There are too many good cameos to acknowledge but I will mention a few. Rhys Evan Moore as Biondello delivers the tongue twister speech announcing Petruchio's arrival so well that he just about stops the show. John Harris plays a travelling drummer who is gotten drunk and then convinced to stand in as Lucentio's absent father. The drummer gets into the role so deeply that he ends up believing it. The drummer turned conspirator turned zealot is played with great zany glee.

The set is so well done, it will be a shame to tear down. The set carpenter, Patrick McEvoy, and his crew built a raw wood western facade that stands up to a lot of action. The decorative details were carefully added with the possible exception of the nude on the bar room wall. It looked like it was painted from someone's faulty memory, a most curious effect!

Some production details were quirky, but will smooth out as the production settles down. For instance, Petruchio's whip doesn't want to crack when it should and the photographer's flashpan doesn't go off with enough gusto for me. There is also a strobelit bar fight scene. I would have slowed the strobe down a bit to get more exaggerated "freeze framing." Still, it all works. We enjoy seeing the troupe enjoy doing the play.

Costumes were by Gloria C. Mattos Hughes who manages to get all the western costumes types represented: black suit/silver accents, stove pipe hat with feather/vest, Civil War jacket/jeans, drummer with windowpane plaid suit, traditional cowboy, etc.

Barney Hulse's piano livened up the action but could have used amplification for those stretches where he had to fill the gap between action. You can't hear him very well past the first few rows.

The Taming of the Shrew, co-produced by Monterey Peninsula college and the Forest Theatre Guild, plays Thursdays through Sundays at 8:30 p.m. (A matinee is staged on Saturdays) through August 23rd. Dress warmly because it does get chilly as night falls, even with the wood fires. If smoke bothers you, sit in the back rows.

MUSIC CORNER

By Jo Ann La Torra

Buskers steal show

THE CAMBRIDGE Buskers were an inspired addition to the Carmel Bach Festival. Although their relationship to Baroque music is no stronger than to any other period, their levity breathed fresh air into the Festival.

My dictionary gives several meanings for "busk," one of them having to do with a lady's corsets. None of them has any direct relationship to music, but it certainly it not the first word we have borrowed from outside.

Whatever the meaning they have in mind, the two young men are very entertaining. Dag Ingram plays accordion which is, after all, reed organ. Michael Copley plays a variety of recorders, the transverse flute, crumhorn and gemshorn. And probably many others; these happen to be the ones we heard on Thursday. They are very good on their respective instruments. This is doubly necessary for those who employ comedy as part of the act, as there is no room for technical unease.

It would be impossible to describe everything they did. Those who heard it don't need my description. For those who didn't hear it, mention should be made of the complete Brandenburg Concertos in three movements, and the third movements of all the Beethoven Symphonies in 35 seconds. The "Ride of the Valkure" had a special charm; the overture to the Marriage of Figaro will not be equalled for a long time; Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" on crumhorn was worth the price of admission by itself. But this accomplishes nothing. If you missed them, don't let it happen again! They recall the good ol' days of Hoffnung.

Well, yes, there was another half to the program. Cellist Peter Rejto and pianist Janet Guggenheim played an A major Sonata by Boccherini. It was not a very profound piece, but it was well performed and made a pleasant curtain-raiser.

Violinist Christiane Edinger and Ms. Guggenheim then gave a very correct performance of a Mozart Sonata.

But it was the Cambridge-Buskers who stole the show.

Outdoor music

GUITARIST TERRENCE Farrell and friends will perform at the Outdoor Forest Theatre in Carmel Sunday, Aug. 9 and 2 p.m.

Aquarium recruits volunteers

The Monterey Bay Aquarium is accepting applications for its fall guide training course. Anyone age 14 and older is welcome to try his hand at volunteering.

As a non-profit, self-supporting institution, the aquarium relies heavily on volunteer guides to interpret its many exhibits. Knowledge of marine biology, oceanography and other marine sciences is gained through an intensive 45-hour training course.

The 16-week course begins Sept. 1. College credits are available through San Jose State University and Monterey Peninsula College. Call 649-6466 for more information.

Asian music recital set

The Oriental Art Society of the Monterey Peninsula will present a recital of music for the koto and samisen by local residents Michael Hattori and Philip Flavin on Tuesday, Aug. 11, 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room of the Crossroads Shopping Center.

Both young men have studied music in Japan. The program will consist of five pieces: one classical piece for koto and samisen with voice, one modern classical piece, one solo each on the koto and, lastly, a contemporary piece with both musicians playing koto. Some explanation of the music and instruments will preceed the recital.

Take a load off your heart.

Noted painter Neiman turns his talents to sculpture

A SCULPTURE collection by renowned painter Leroy Neiman is currently showing at Hanson Galleries in Carmel.

Neiman is perhaps America's best known living artist, universally acclaimed as a colorist extraordinaire and a chronicler of contemporary life.

Now he makes one of his rare forays into sculpture, as Neiman temporarily forsakes the brush and palette for the fire and the forge in a new series of bronze sculptures.

His paintings sing with electric hues, vibrate with shimmering excitement. Race meets, prize fights and all kinds of sporting events are celebrated in bruising purples, screaming yellows, violent blues and bloody reds.

The teeming humanity in this neon world is so invigorating, so varied, that it is possible to overlook one of Neiman's most salient characteristics: he is a superb draftsman. His line is quick and deft, his hands are sure; his eye piercingly accurate.

Which is why Neiman's sculpture warrants our special attention. De-glossed of its technicolor bravura, his sculptural works emerge as the purest example of his use of shape and form.

DEFIANT IS the first of Leroy Neiman's sculpture series showing at Hanson Galleries in Carmel.

"Defiant" is the first of LeRoy Neiman's sculptures in the new collection. This magnificent bronze depicts a wild, tempestuous horse rearing in brave defiance.

As untamed as the wind, the steed is fierce and proud: nostrils flaring; mane a-flying; limbs and haunches sharply delineated in their musculature. "Defiant" reveals Neiman's sure grasp of anatomical structure and his intimate familiarity with his noble animal — one of the most reccurent subjects throughout his works.

But it is not merely an animal to which Neiman pays homage in this sculpture but a spirit; the unquenchable spirit that inhabits the stout of heat. For the act of standing up for oneself is as much a symbol of the artist's own beliefs as it is thrilling tribute to this most brave of nature's creatures.

Gloriously exhilarating, vigorous yet elegant, "Defiant" will continue to be prized many years from now. For even though the bright glare of social celebrityhood may dim through the ages, true artistic worth is never fleeting. And in "Defiant" the strengths of LeRoy Neiman ring out loud and clear.

Neiman's work is ranked with the greatest of contemporary examples of American art and is to be found in major collections as far afield as the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad, Wodham College in Oxford, England, the Art Institute of Chicago, and The Minnesota Museum of Art.

Neiman harnesses the power of the rainbow to light up his canvases. His tones are vivid, jarring splashes of biting color that, close-up, remain as abstract shapes but, at a distance, resolve themselves into floating, shifting images of energy and action. It is his unashamed use of color that places him alongside the Fauves; while the rawness and violence of his brushstrokes put him within the tradition of the Abstract Expressionists particularly action painters like Pollock and DeKooning.

Like his paintings, Neiman's sculptures capture the swirl, the motion, the vigor and the energy of Neiman's unique view of the world. And the solidity which in his painting he achieves through the quick juxtaposition of colorful shapes he renders just as surely by his sharp grasp of line and form and anatomical structure.

As "Defiant" so dramtically illustrates, were he not so multi-talented, Neiman could just as easily be known for his magnificent sculpture.

Specifications of "Defiant": Year, 1987; Medium, bronze; Edition: 350 plus 50 artist's proofs and 30 hors commerce — Dimensions: Height 13 3/8".

Retired commercial artist rediscovers fine art work

THE MARJORIE Evans Gallery is pleased to present a showing of new works by J. Harold Davis. An exhibition of his water color and acrylic scapes will run through Aug. 3.

J. Harold Davis, a native New Yorker, showed promising art talent during his early childhood. At the age of 16, he was the youngest student to be admitted to Cooper Union College of Art and Architecture in New York. Upon graduation he went on to several years of postgraduate study at the National Academy of Design in New York City.

There he studied under such well known art teachers as Louis Betts, Ivan Olinsky and Raymond P.R. Nielson. As part of his personal process of education, he devoted considerable time to studying the works of the Masters exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, and at the Jeu de Paume and Louvre in Paris.

Davis left fine art for a lucrative career in commercial art. This career encompassed working for the top advertising agencies in New York City, as well as Mobil Oil, McDonnell Douglas Astronautics, Inc., Hughes Aircraft Company and ownership of his own advertising company. His works hang in the executive offices of numerous large corporations and have been published in prominent national and international newspapers and magazines.

Upon his retirement from commercial art and advertising, Davis and his wife moved to Carmel. Here he has found the time and inspiration to return to his first love: the creation of fine art. The misty Carmel climate, with its profusion of flowers and greenery, coupled with memories Davis has retained of other places he has visited in his travels have formed the basis for a series of beautiful landscapes he has been creating.

Time has not dimmed Davis' keen understanding of the proper use of light and color. His work is like a breath of fresh air, inviting the viewer into a tranquil world, partly composed of reality, partly composed of dreams.

The Marjorie Evans Gallery is open each weekday from 9 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Authored by Athol Fugard and ably directed by Suzanne Allyn, The Blood Knot is a drama of racial tension in South Africa, braced with intense emotional understanding of the schisms that separate men.

Fugard and Zakes Mokae appeared in the first production Sept. 3, 1961 in Sophiatown near Johannesburg, South Africa. At that time blacks and whites were allowed to perform together, since forbidden by the South African government.

The Taming of the Shrew

A rip-roaring version of William Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew runs through Aug. 23 at the Outdoor Forest Theatre in Carmel. This Monterey Peninsula College and Forest Theatre Guild co-production is directed by James Dunn in what he calls "Spaghetti Western" style.

Dunn's version of the Bard's romantic comedy casts Canadian actress Dorian Ellis as a Calamity Jane-type Kate, and David Miller as a gun-slinging Petruchio. "Children are encouraged to bring along an adult," says a publicity statement.

Dunn, from Marin College, mounted a Wild West rendering of the Shrew for the Edinburgh Festival, for which he won accolades. He has also worked with ACT in San Francisco as well as Julliard in New York and the Old Globe in San Diego. He directed the recent beach version of Comedy of Errors for MPC.

For this production he also calls upon thespians Bill Lindsay, Gwyneth Hovick, Larry Welch, Ron Genauer, Keith Decker, Tommie Bates, Bud Smith, Rhys-Evan Moore, Ron Cohen, Phil Pratt, Kris Niffenegger, Michael Miller, John Harris, Lorraine M. Olsen, Howard Hinckley Jr., Jerry Cohen, Barney Hulse (as the piano player), Karen M. Bowers, Susanne Burns and Lisa McKaney.

The Taming of the Shrew will run Thursday through Sunday at 8:30 p.m., as well as 2 o'clock Saturday matinees. Tickets are $8 general, $6 for MPC season ticket holders, students, military and seniors, $4 children under 6.

The 19th century work inspired the hit Broadway musical Sweeney Todd. The troupers will stage an olio of songs and skits following the show.

The theater, the oldest in the state, is located on Pacific Street at Scott in Monterey. Curtain is at 8 p.m. Wednesday-Saturday through August.

MOTOWN SOUNDS of the Shirelles will help usher in this year's Monterey County Fair at 6 and 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11. The fair runs Aug. 11-16 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds and Exposition Park.

New life brought to old art of tapestry creation

THE AGE old art of tapestry comes to life at the Reid Gallery. The world's foremost contemporary tapestry weaver, Whitney Peckman, will greet the guests at a reception for her at the Reid Gallery in the Barnyard Shopping Center Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 8 and 9, 2-5 p.m.

Peckman creates tapestries with a painterly command of the medium that has never been used in the long history of tapestry art.

She works on a large harness loom. Her creations range from 48 x 72 inches to 30 x 36 inches.

She dyes her own fabrics and works with silk, wool and linen. Her subjects run from florals to sea and landscapes to a more abstract representation of natural crystals.

She shows exclusively at the Reid Gallery in both Carmel and Friday Harbor, WA.

Peckman will bring six new weavings from her home in Washington for the Carmel exhibit. The Reid Gallery has shipped Peckman's tapestries to collectors all over the world.

In Atlanta, GA, a home displaying Peckman's work received the Atlanta interior design award of the year and was featured in the magazine, House Beautiful..

Peckman has worked with textiles for many years. Before taking up weaving, she did silk screen on fabric. Her desire for a more three-dimensional composition led to her interest and subsequent mastery of tapestries.

Legends of rock music open fair

THOSE OLDIES but goodies, played by some of the legends of rock 'n' roll, will set the tone for a fun-filled Monterey County Fair Tuesday evening, Aug. 11 at the fairgrounds in Monterey.

Performing on the fair's opening night will be the Drifters, the Rivingtons and the Shirelles, for two shows, beginning at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The Drifters began performing in 1953. The group hit the charts when singer Ben E. King joined the group in 1958. Drifters hits include There Goes My Baby, This Magic Moment, Up on the Roof and Under the Boardwalk.

The Rivingtons have played with many popular artists, including the Beach Boys, Four Seasons, Supremes, Marvin Gaye and more. The group has also appeared in the films Animal House and E.T..

The Shirelles opened the fair last year with their inspiring Motown hits and they're back this year. Started in New Jersey in 1958, the Shirelles went on to tour with The Dick Clark Good Ol' Rock and Roll Show for 12 years.

Shirelles hits include Soldier Boy, Dedicated to the One I Love and Will You Love Me Tomorrow.

The Monterey County Fair will run Aug. 11-16 at the Monterey County Fairgrounds and Exposition Park.

Don't leave hot coals on the beach — they burn

"DON'T COVER those coals," state Parks and Recreation Director Henry R. Agonia admonished picnickers on California's state beaches from San Diego to Del Norte counties.

That message repeats the warning of a new poster to be displayed on the beaches of California, a poster that shows a bare foot about to descend on a bed of red hot coals, and words that read, "Save soles, don't bury hot coals." The poster was produced by the Burn Institute of San Diego in cooperation with the State Department of Parks and Recreation.

Beach-goers sometimes build illegal fires on the sandy beaches, Agonia explained, and when they are ready to leave, cover the fires with sand, believing that they have done their duty by putting out the fire. But sand will not quench the hot coals from a beach barbecue; it just insulates them. It allows just enough air supply to keep the coals slowly burning for hours — out of sight and mind but not out of heat.

The sand on top of the coals is often hot enough to cause serious burns to bare feet and other exposed parts of bodies basking or frolicking in the sun.

responsible for a new interest in conservation."

The Sierra Club, says Koeppel, created an interest in land environment with their publications of some 25 years ago. "Now the marine artists are doing the same thing for the marine environment.

"They're fishing, in a way, to bring to the surface images of marine life, in the context of beauty."

Much of the marine art you'll see at the expo is anatomically correct, created with a high level of sophistication and understanding of the subjects. "They're communicating conservation," says Koeppel of the artists.

Asked if the artists might be over-romanticizing, Koeppel responded: "You'll find less romantic treatment in marine art than in any other form of art, yet you have the human imagination at play."

Featured artist of Expo '87 is Hawaiian artist Richard Pettit, whose rendering of a California sea otter on the Expo '87 signature poster is a good case in point. Hailey, the sea otter, is at once realistic and impressionistic.

It takes no stretching of the imagination to see that Koeppel has some extraordinarily beautiful pieces on display in the Monterey Marine Art Expo '87 tent. Don't miss this one.

WHO ME? is the title of this oil painting by artist Robert Lupetti. A reception for the artist will be held at the Simic Galleries in Carmel Saturday, Aug. 8, 5-9 p.m. Lupetti will have a one-man show at the gallery through August.

20th century artist puts classic realism to use

A ONE MAN show of the work of Roberto Lupetti, Renaissance artist of the 20th century, is currently running at the Simic Galleries in Carmel. A champagne reception for Lupetti will be held Saturday, Aug. 8, 5-9 p.m. at the gallery, corner of San Carlos and Sixth streets in Carmel.

Beyond pop art, non-ojbective splashes of color, surreal images and distorted perspectives, expressionism, impressionism and multi-media art still lies the ever enduring beauty of classical realism. For the last five centuries this form of artistic expression has dominated other styles and techniques, its canvas, murals, frescos and sculpture resting in many of the world's most prestigious churches and museums.

We admire the Renaissance masters for they sought to achieve a visual clarity never before achieved. This resulted in an enchanting directness between artist and viewer. Recording life in a romantic and symbolic manner, years could be spent on a single work of art, altering, refining and perfecting a composition. Every detail was accounted for, from the glint of sunlight on a nose, cheek or mouth, to the individual threads in a high-collared blouse.

For most of us, the secrets of their talent has been lost — a long-forgotten legacy. Today we stand before their masterpieces marveling at the technical supremacy each projects. There seems to be a cavern of time between their art and what we view today. However for a select few, this time barrier is removed. In prestigious European academies the techniques and philosophies of the classical painters has been preserved, passed from generation to generation, available only to those individuals who show great artistic promise.

Roberto Lupetti is one of these classically trained artists. Born in 1918 in Milan, Italy, he was raised in an environment that nurtured creativity. At the age of 14 he was accepted to attend Brera Liceo Artistico, one of the most prestigious art academies in Italy. It is no surprise that Lupetti chose this path, as his father was an acclaimed music and art critic who socialized with such famed personalities as Puccini, Toscanni, Mascagni, Giorenzo, Palanti and Dechirico.

Once involved in the strict curriculum, Lupetti learned the many disciplines established by the Renaissance painters, examining and then putting into practice their laws of art. Of the four years in which he studied at Brera Liceo Artistico, the first two were devoted solely to drawing.

Carmel, Ca., 625-5300

Location...Location...Location

There is a little maze of streets off Viscaino, which is off Mt. View, which takes a 45 degree angle off Ocean Avenue and leads to the Forest Theater. This distortion totally befuddles all but deeply experienced Carmel viewers. But what's important is (a) you are only about 2 blocks from downtown Carmel, and (b) you have a view of the Fish Ranch at the mouth of the Valley.

This house is bounded by three streets: Flanders Way, Acacia and Rastro Vista. And that's not to mention Crespi Avenue, a scant 50 feet away. Thus you may choose your own address...or vary it from time to time. The lot is surrounded by a grape stake fence, and vines cover the grounds.

The entrance is across a paved patio with flowers on every side, and comes to a newly painted teal green door. (Actually we liked the original burnt orange color, but this attention to detail is typical of the remodeller). Inside you find a slate-paved entry hall opening directly to a 27x15 living room. A brick fireplace dominates the south wall, and sliding doors give on to a deck facing west. All the floors throughout are oak.

To the right from the front door is a long pullman kitchen with vinyl floor, tiled counters, blue-papered walls and built-in appliances. Washer and dryer are neatly tucked into a laundry nook at the far end.

Three bedrooms and two baths are to the left of the entrance. All are generous in size, well lighted, nicely separated from the daytime areas.

The garage is detached, and a very interesting building it is. The rear half of it is acoustically equipped as a recording studio and has been used as such. But it can just as readily go back to being a garage in which your engine will sound like the purring of a Cheshire cat.

This is an immaculate, comfortable, liveable house, 1400 sq. ft., in a quiet fascinating location convenient to every place you want to go. It's $259,500, a real bargain in the Carmel market.

CARMEL LEGENDS

No. 28

We have lately (and temporarily) come into possession of a copy of the TELEPHONE DIRECTORY for Monterey and San Benito Counties dated February, 1930. It's a little larger than a Reader's Digest, a bit tattered, stained in places by wine and tomato sauce, and runs to about 100 pages. The Carmel section is 7 pages and lists numbers like 352-W, 44 and 2-J-5. Fairy Lee Byrd, for example, is 841, the Fire Department is 100, and Miss Eliza Clevenger is 1-J-3. Robinson Jeffers is not listed because he didn't believe in telephones. Edward Weston (782) and Hazel Watrous (361) did. The yellow pages are not yellow at all, run to 51 indexed pages and are called "Buyer's Guide." 94 restaurants are listed (9 in Carmel), and only 1 of the Carmel restaurants survives today. There were 42 physicians in 1930, more like 242 today. Real estate offices (may their tribe decrease) add up to 77, of which 3 are still extant in some form; but remember, this covers 2 counties. There were 82 hotels (some duplication), no motels. Ice business was big: 9 outlets. Travelling through this list of 57 years ago is fascinating...and more than slightly disconcerting. Do you suppose that somebody in the year 2044 will be equally enchanted with our telephone book?
